CELEBRATES HER 92ND BIRTHDAY

MRS. HARRIETT TOMPKINS IS GIVEN PARTY AT HOME OF HER DAUGHTER IN BATH

The home of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Ruttan, Bath, was the scene of a joyful and unique party on June 21st, when a party was given here in honor of Mrs. Ruttan's mother, Mrs. Harriet Tompkins, on the occasion of her ninety-second birthday. The party was doubly unique in that it served many purposes of joyful celebration. The house has just recently been built and the thirty-seventh anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ruttan's wedding is on June 23rd, so that the event was a birthday party, a housewarming and an anniversary celebration.

Four generations were represented beginning with Mrs. Tompkins, her children, seventeen grand-children and some twelve great-grand-children. The children of the honored lady are Frank, of Newburgh; John A., of Bath; and Charles, of Watertown, and one daughter, Mrs. D. R. Ruttan, of Bath. All the children were present with the exception of Charles, of Watertown.

MRS. THOS. ANDERSON

On Saturday evening, 17th instant, Napanee lost an old and highly esteemed resident in the person of Mrs. Thomas Anderson, who lived here for over thirty years. She was highly respected and held in affectionate regard by all who knew her. She was a faithful member of St. Patrick's congregation and her devout christian example will long be remembered in this parish. Mrs. Anderson's maiden name was Bridget Ellen Quirk and she was a native of Ireland; coming to Canada at about two years of age with her parents. Her husband, Thomas Anderson, predeceased her about seventeen years ago. Her illness was of over a year's duration and extended much suffering which she bore with true christian patience and fortitude and she derived much comfort from the constant prayer and loving care of her daughter, Gertrude. The funeral services were held in St. Patrick's church, on Monday morning and were very beautiful and impressive. The mass was sung by the Rev. Father T. P. O'Connor, M. A., the music rendered by the choir was exquisite. The favorite hymn of the deceased, "Nearer My God to Thee," was splendidly rendered by Miss Frances Dwyer. The large attendance at her funeral was a testimony of the high esteem in which this kind and amiable lady was held. The pallbearers were Messrs. J. Gleason, A. McGuire, R. McNeill, J. Nolan, T. Huffman, L. Sweet, D. J. Hogan. Amongst those from out of town who attended the funeral may be mentioned Mrs. Jas. J. Doyle, Mrs. T. Murphy and the Misses Anderson, Kingston. The flowers on the altar and on the casket were lovely and appropriate.

IS BRILLIANT JUNE SOCIETY EVENT.

One of the smartest and most picturesque nuptial events in many a day in the city was responsible for a large assemblage of fashionable guests Saturday afternoon, in the First Presbyterian Church, when Isabel Florence, daughter of the late David James Cowan and Mrs. Cowan, "Birkhill," was united in marriage to Mr. George Reginald Grange, of this city, son of the late A. W. Grange, Esq., and Mrs. Grange, of Napanee. Summer flowers, magnificent peonies, with branches of syringa were massed against the choir gallery and pulpit, while the pews reserved for invited guests were marked by knots of orange blossoms. The minister of the church, Col. (Rev.) William Beattie, D.D., C. M.G., officiated, Mr. George Lethbridge presiding at the organ. Promptly at 4.30 o'clock the groom and best man, Mr. Mervin Sutcliffe, of Lindsay, entered the auditorium from the vestry and took their places. The triumphant strains of the Lohengrin bridal music announced the arrival of the bridal party, which advanced up the aisle preceded by the ushers, Messrs. Kenneth Ingram, Grant Fisher, Ernest Little, Russell Beattie, Eric Stewart, Lindsay, and Sherman Hill, Kingston. Next came the flower fairies, the Misses Constance Lailey, tiny daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Lailey, of Toronto, veritable little human flowers in petal frocks of yellow French organdy. With these were worn hats with scalloped and fluted yellow organdy crowns of lattice work in shades of pale pink, blue and orchid. They carried colonial bouquets of sweet peas. Following was the bridesmaid, Miss Kathleen Cowan, younger sister of the bride, winsome in trailing frock of pink georgette, gracefully draped with long side panels, and her pink hat wreathed with lilacs shading from pink to mauve. Her bouquet was a shower of orchids and sweet peas. The young matron-of-honor, Mrs. Clarence Kemp, of Toronto, was a picture to delight the eye in a gown of orchaid georgette, fashioned exactly like that of the bridesmaid, with white [illegible] and orchid mauve [illegible] hat, twined with lilacs [illegible] caing from pale pink to deep [illegible] and silver shoes. She carried a shower of orchids and pink sweet peas.

Last came the lovely young bride, one of London's most popular society girls, a vision in her nuptial robe of cut velvet on satin, draped at the sides, a cascade of orange blossoms caught down one side. The neck was cut in batteau mode, the sleeves girlishly short. The long court train was of white satin lined with pale green georgette, and over it fell in graceful folds the wedding veil of rose-pointe lace, arranged in coronet fashion, held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried Ophelia roses showered with lilies of the valley.

Following the service in the church the guests drove to "Birkhill," the home of the bride's mother, Talbot street, where a reception was held, during which the music of Lombardo's orchestra provided a delightful accompaniment to the hum of conversation and laughter.

The happy young couple received the congratulations of relatives and friends, standing in a bay window in the drawing-room, banked with palms, roses and ponsettias.

Mrs. Cowan, mother of the bride, welcomed her guests, wearing a handsome black gown of rainbow crepe embroidered in jet, a black hat with ostrich garniture, a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley adding a color touch.

Mrs. Grange, mother of the groom, also wore a handsome black costume and corsage of orchids and lillies. Mrs. E. W. Grange was gowned in mauve with white leghorn hat, and carried mauve sweet peas. Miss Constance Grange, sister of the groom, wore a dainty frock of white and blue, and blue hat.

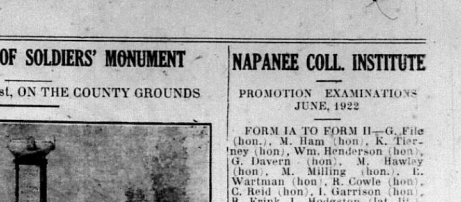
The buffet luncheon was served in the dining-room from a table centered with a silver basket of roses and adiantum ferns, and banked with roses and ferns placed at the corners.

Mr. and Mrs. Grange left Saturday evening on their motor trip honeymoon at Lake Placid, N.Y., after which they will take up their residence in London. For traveling the bride donned a chic French frock of navy blue canton crepe embroidered with steel beads and navy blue straw hat with French plume. Her smart wrap was of black canton crepe lined with cherry red, and finished with a caracul collar.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pepler, Toronto; Mrs. A. W. Grange and Miss Constance Grange, Napanee; Mrs. Winnett-Thompson, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sampson, Gananoque; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Richardson, Napanee; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gooderham, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carlyle, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rice, Detroit; Mrs. Decourcy O'Grady, Winnipeg; Mr. and Mrs. Lang Cowan, and Miss Mabel Cowan, Galt.—London Advertiser, June 19th.

RE DECORATION OF SOLDIERS' MONUMENT

AT NAPANEE, JULY 1st, ON THE COUNTY GROUNDS



(Brig. Gen. Hughes, of Ottawa, will deliver an address at the decoration services on Saturday).

On Dominion Day last year, the "United Empire Loyalists" Chapter, of the Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, initiated the decoration of our Soldiers' Monument by the placing of a wreath at its base. There was also a floral offering from the daughters of Dorcas, and several others by individuals, with a very simple attendant ceremony.

Realizing the value of such an observance of the children, young people and others of our town and vicinity, the daughters of the Empire desire to make this an annual event, and of as impressive a nature as possible.

To this end the Chapter has obtained the permission and cooperation of the County Council for such an observance. The interest and assistance of the Mayor and Town Council is also being sought, as well as that of the Principals, staffs and pupils of our schools. Invitations have been sent the above, as well as to the Officers commanding the 8th Hussars, Corps of Signalling Corps, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Guides, the Frontenac Regiment, also any ex-service men who care to attend, and the co-operation of the Napanee Band will be required, as well as the attendance of the School Board.

The Chapter is hoping for, and counting upon the children, the young people and others, taking part in a not too lengthy, though interesting programme.

The day chosen for this commemoration being the afternoon of Dominion Day, Saturday, July 1st, at o'clock, at the Monument, where it is hoped a large assemblage will show interest and approval by its presence.

A most cordial invitation is extended to all citizens and everyone interested to be present, and thus assist the committee of the I.O.D.E. in charge of the ceremonies of the day in impressing upon our children and youth the necessity of keeping ever in remembrance the gallant deeds, so nobly done, the supreme sacrifice made by our valient men, and the undying glory to which they have attained.

A very special invitation is extended to all friends and relatives of the brave men whose names appear on the County Memorial, and if any of them, the public, or any organization desire to place a tribute of flowers at its base, let it be fully understood that the privilege is theirs.

SALARY PROPOSALS

In presenting the report of the Laymen's Association, M. C. Bogart, Napanee, recommended a minimum salary of $1,650, including house keep. Objection was taken on the ground that where no house was provided the station would be paying a higher salary. One of the clauses embodied a scathing indictment of tobacco. Rev. G. E. Ross suggested that a copy of this clause be forwarded to the professors at Victoria College.

A unique feature of Friday afternoon's session of the Bay of Quinte Conference, was the golden jubilee service at which five workers were present who had completed 50 years or more in the service of the Methodist church. They were: Rev. E. N. Baker, Principal of Albert College, Belleville; Dr. S. J. Shorey, of Napanee, member of the Methodist Court of Appeal; Rev. Francis Johnson, of Lindsay; Rev. Simon Crickshank, of Peterboro, and Rev. Erastus Howard, of Bloomfield.

WHAT NIAGARA FALLS SAYS ABOUT THE FIRST DAY CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAMME

The following is an exact copy of the article appearing in the Niagara Falls Evening Review of June 20th, 1922, reporting on the first day's programme of Chautauqua:

CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAM WAS NOTEWORTHY

First Day's Schedule was a Winner—Ferguson Quintette and John Duxbury score high

"With such a programme as was given at the Chautauqua tent yesterday the interest ought to mount speedily, for the programs were simply excellent, and as we heard one remark, "the program of the first day alone was worth the whole price of the season's ticket."

Ald. Wilkinson at the afternoon meeting fittingly welcomed Chautauqua to town, and introduced Mr. Campbell, who is manager of the tent, and chairman.

In his opening remarks Mr. Campbell complimented Niagara Falls, Ontario, on its many features of special interest. The Ferguson Operatic Co. made a hundred per cent. hit from their opening number, "Ting-a-ling," through songs, duets, new songs, negro spiritual songs, extracts from the Mikado and Harry Lauder's songs to the end of the program.

This company not only sing excellently but they acting is clever, etc. Their audience is kept at tip-toe of interest from first to last.

The programme in the evening was high class. The Ferguson Operatic Co. provided the major part of the evening's program, giving excerpts from the opera "Martha," by Flotow, which was rendered in the Mikado and Harry Lauder's songs to the end of the program.

The major part of the evening's program was given by Mr. John Duxbury, of England. Mr. Duxbury has appeared in the Falls before, and left behind him an excellent reputation. He is said to be England's greatest reciter, and that is quite easily believed, judging by his work here last night. He gave a powerful number from Les Miserables, The Shades Banquet, and Old Farmer Grey. He has that rare talent of presenting the scene before his hearers with no apparent effort.

Mr. Duxbury is the true artist, and Chautauqua is to be congratulated in securing such high class talent.

Napanee Chautauqua dates are July 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

"He's not in his office just now!"

How often have you put in a call for — say Mr. Brown of the Robinson Machine Company — and when connection was made, learned that he was out?

Because you asked for Mr. Brown, it cost you — because of the extra service we rendered — about 20% more than if you had asked simply for the Robinson Machine Company.

The majority of Long Distance users find that if they put in a call for a firm — not for an individual — at the lower Station-to-Station rate, they can always get in touch at once with the particular person they prefer to talk with, or with a deputy who will answer the purpose.

Our gain will come when you appreciate the speed and economy of Station-to-Station service. After 8.30 P.M. the evening rate on Station-to-Station calls is only about one-half the day rate.

WAS AN ENGLISH LAD.

Charles A. Dunning Reaches High Office In Canada.

The second English farm boy to achieve a Canadian Premiership within a year is Hon. Charles A. Dunning, of Saskatchewan. It is only a few months also since Alberta farmers elevated "Herb" Greenfield to the highest office in the province's gift.

Nineteen years ago, Charlie, a bobbledehoy lad of eighteen years, from Leicestershire, climbed off a tourist car at Yorkton, deposited his carpet bag and cricket bat on the platform, stretched his legs and declared: "Here's where I start to climb the ladder, and in a few years—" Within an hour he had hired himself out to a farmer at $10 a month and board.

A little later Dunning was a homesteader at Beaverdale, twenty-five miles from a railway. That district of Saskatchewan was then a cross section of Europe. Eager, restless immigrants were pouring in from all quarters. It was the "real thing" in the melting pot of citizenship. There is therefore nothing second-hand about Dunning's experience of the struggles of immigrants.

Driven from his native England by need for a dryer climate, young Dunning brought with him a love of good books and a taste for political economy. The long winter evenings on the prairie gave him opportunity for study. Debates were organized in the Beaverdale school house and Dunning soon became a leader. By 1910 he was elected a director of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association.

Though prominent in the farmers' co-operative associations, Dunning in politics has maintained his original allegiance to the old-time Liberal party. In 1916, he joined the Saskatchewan Government as Provincial Treasurer. Whether Dunning, by reason of his calling, of which he is proud, and his long association with the farmers' co-operative societies, can make a political peace with the Progressives and retain the reins of power remains to be seen.

In any case the newest Premier is likely to be heard from further in Canadian affairs. An unspoiled English-Canadian, fortune has endowed him with a gift of lucid thought and speech, a capacity for hard work, an aggressiveness of mind and manner, a good conceit of himself and a lovable personality.

THE "NEW NORTH"

A SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE

To men who spend their vacation fishing, hunting or canoeing, Canada is first among the countries of the world for the opportunities it affords for indulgence in either of these inviting, invigorating and exciting pastimes.

But there is one part of the Dominion which is particularly inviting to the sporting fisherman, the big game hunter or canoeist. It is what is aptly termed Canada's "New North," reached via Cochrane, and comprehends that vast stretch of virgin country contiguous to the Canadian National Railways, Transcontinental Division extending across the upper part of the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec for a distance of over a thousand miles, with Hudson Bay as its northern limit. To quote a traveller who knows it well: "It is a virgin country just as God made it."

To the sportsman this northern country is a veritable paradise. Within its vast forests there roam at will nearly all species of big game common to the North American continent. Of the big and burly moose it is the home. Red deer have a wide range and in some sections are numerous, while caribou are to be had by the hunter who seeks them in their feeding grounds. In several districts bear are to be found, while the smaller fur-bearing animals are common to a wide range of territory.

Disciples of Izaak Walton will find in the numerous rivers and lakes all that the most ardent of them can desire, both in regard to extent and variety of fish which abound in their waters. Lake, or grey trout, ranging in weight from six to twenty pounds, are common to several of the lakes. Waters in which speckled trout abound are easily accessible, although naturally, the more remote the districts the better the sport. In some of the rivers and streams are to be caught speckled brook trout (known also as the square tail trout weighing from five to seven pounds. Good bass fishing is to be had in certain parts, and particularly in northwestern Quebec. One specie of fish which is common to some of the older parts of Canada not found in this far-northern country is the maskinonge. But in some of the waters flowing into James Bay are to be caught the lordly sturgeon, sportsmen having landed fish of this species ranging in weight all the way from twenty to two hundred pounds. In the waters contiguous to Hudson Bay excellent salmon fishing is occasionally experienced. Pike and pickerel are common to the waters of this northern wild.

To the canoist who seeks adventure in territory beyond the fringe of civilization the waters of the northern parts of Quebec and Ontario afford ideal facilities. Rivers, many of them mighty streams which for generations have served as highways to adventurers, fur-traders and trappers bound to and from Hudson Bay, are almost beyond compute in number, the country being grid-ironed by them. Wonderfully interesting canoe trips, either extended or limited, are available. Take for example the six routes to Moose Factory all of which find their way into Moose River about 30 miles south of Moose Factory on James Bay.

Until within recent years this great new north was inaccessible to those who had but a few weeks vacation at their disposal. It could not even be reached during an ordinary vacation period over the lines of the Canadian National Railways, the sporting fisherman, the hunter, the canoeist and holiday seekers in general can, occupying en route moderately appointed steel-constructed trains, reach the "Happy Hunting Ground" in the course of a twenty-four hour journey from such centres as Toronto and Montreal, and from New York, Chicago and Boston in approximately thirty-six hours.

And there is an interesting little booklet entitled "Where to Hunt, Fish and Paddle in the New North," obtainable from any office of the Canadian National Railways, which enables the holiday seeker to select his camping ground in this primeval paradise. A number of sectional maps covering the sporting territory from west of Lake Nipigon to Western Quebec, in which are shown canoe routes and trails, will prove invaluable to the sportsman visiting the territory.

The Booklet also furnishes information regarding guides, outfit and other necessary detail. 30-b

PARLIAMENTARY LETTER

In every gathering of men there are a certain number who are imbued with a great spirit of optimism. In the House of Commons, towards the middle of each session this takes the form of prediction as to when the session will end. This year it started about the usual time, with talk of prorogation by June 20th. Then the date was moved along. But for the past few days there have been many members, high in the councils of their respective parties, who harbored hopes of prorogation by Saturday night at the latest. Present indications are that they guessed by almost a week.

Friday there is the supplementary estimates, and while they will not take very long to dispose of, they embrace the bonus problem of the civil service and that alone will probably develop a day's debate.

The Pensions Committee recommendations are through without amendment and most of the budget resolutions have been passed. In the case of the former, the committee has brought down what seems a very fair and thorough report. They recommend that a royal commission be named to investigate the charges against the Pensions Board made by the G.W.V.A., and also brought in several changes in the existing laws which will, it is believed, be of considerable advantage to returned men all over the Dominion. There has been a little easing up of the settlement of loan payments, and other changes which should have a salutary effect.

One of the important recommendations of the committee is that a Board of Appeal be formed to sit on cases where pensions have been refused and where there have been disagreements between either the Pensions Board and D.S.C.R. doctors, or between either of these and civil doctors. This board should be able to pass upon many of the cases which at present come again and again before the Pensions Committee of parliament and consequently not only save much time but also remove much of the present unrest in these matters.

The Crow's Nest Pass Agreement is likely to be the chief stumbling block in the way of prorogation. The Committee which has had the matter of transportation costs in hand, reported against bringing back that agreement by the narrow majority of the chairman's vote, and accepted the latest offer of the railways which was for a 20 per cent. cut on most commodities. There will, however, be a hard battle when the report comes into the commons, and there is at least a likelihood of a somewhat lengthy debate before it goes through. Here and there are rumors of a coming blockade, but that is not likely to materialize. The majority of the House would seem to be in favor of accepting the general reduction in freight rates and allowing the suspension of the agreement to stand over for another year or two.

Hon. W. C. Kennedy's announcement that the government was laying up 27 of the smaller vessels of the Canadian Merchant Marine and would sell them as soon as possible, has been received with a general feeling of quiet satisfaction. Even the Conservative members appear to have secretely joined in the sigh of relief which went up when it was known that the country would be relieved of the burden of deficits foisted upon it by Hon. C. C. Ballantyne. There is, of course, a great question as to where the government would be likely to find a buyer for the ships at the present time, but it is felt on the whole that the vessels will cost less tied up than if it were attempted to continue them in operation. A suggestion is made that the separate British corporation is in the market to buy ships but there is nothing definite behind it so far.

On the whole the budget modifications made by Mr. Fielding have been well received. There were a few amendments but they all went down to defeat, and on Monday the Minister of Finance announced that the government could not accept any further changes. With that announcement the passage of the resolutions was much easier and good progress was made.

All the legislation of the session has now been placed on the order paper for the House to go ahead with, and the House is sitting late at night in the endeavor to put the balance through at the earliest possible moment. Present indications are that the business of the session should be wound up by the middle of this week at the latest, but of course, there is always the prospect of a hitch in the arrangements. The members on all sides, however, seem to be imbued with a hurry-up spirit and consequently matters go through now in half an hour which earlier in the session would have taken half a day or so.

The members are anxious to get home and are not hankering for any fall session summons. So far as can be learned at the present, there has been considerable thought given to this phase of the matter and the trend of opinion is in favor of the next session being called as early as possible in January so that if possible the western members next year can get back to their homes by somewhere about the first of May. And that is the course which will likely govern when the time comes to consider calling the members back to Ottawa again.

THE FOOD VALUE OF DAIRY PRODUCTS

Milk and dairy products generally are of inestimable food value to the human race, and their comparatively moderate cost makes them accessible to practically every one. Further than that, the products of the dairy add immensely to the wealth of the country. It is a question if the people of Canada sufficiently appreciate either the economic value of the dairy industry to the country at large, or the food value of milk and its products to the individual. In Britain the consumption of cheese per capita greatly exceeds ours. In butter we do better; but in milk our consumption individually has been shown to be one quarter of a pint compared with half a pint per head in the United States. Since the advent of prohibition, however, the United States consumption per capita has increased to three quarters of a pint, and there is evidence to show that Canadians are also taking a great deal more to the lacteal fluid than formerly.

The importance of milk in the diet of both young and old is constantly being emphasized by the medical profession. Malnutrition or undernourishment, it should be understood, is not always the result of insufficient food, but frequently of unwisely and improperly choosen foods. This is supported by the fact that investigation has shown that a large percentage of under-nourished children are the offspring of well-to-do parents. The thoughtful mother will see that her children get plenty of milk from which to build a strong framework, develop mental capacity, and good health. Future happiness depends largely on these factors.

Incubators Are Ancient.

Although hot-air and hot-water incubators were not known in Europe until 1777, the Chinese and Egyptians practiced artificial incubation over 2,000 years ago.

The Egyptians incubated eggs in a very primitive fashion—but obtained excellent results. They built enormous ovens of semi-dried bricks, often covering an area of as much as 6,000 square feet. These same egg-ovens are still in use to-day, the craft having been handed down through the centuries from father to son.

Through the centre of the egg-oven runs a passage which opens up on each side to huge circular vaults, in which the actual hatching is done. Fires are kept alight in each vault, and all surplus heat and smoke escapes from a large hole in the roof. It is not surprising to find that Egyptian fowls are non-sitting. The broody instinct has been bred out of them through the extensive use of the egg-ovens.

During incubation, the porous eggshell admits oxygen and allows the escape of other gases. Every day the shell grows more brittle, so that when the time comes for the live chick to break forth it has no difficulty in doing so. The chick is fortified itself for this task by eating up the yolk-sac of the egg. This accounts for the fact that a newly-hatched chick requires no food for at least twenty-four hours after birth.

A Wierd Film.

The leading character of a motion picture recently shown in the theaters of Paris is a man suffering from paresis or insanity. The characteristic symptoms of the disease are developed on the screen in a masterly manner. Delusions of grandeur, change of personality and maniacal excitement lead on to murder and incarceration, and finally to death by apoplexy. Undoubtedly an alienist was called in to supervise the depiction of these symptoms. The realism is intense, but from that very intensity objections are arising, with the warning that predisposed spectators may be hurried into a state similar to that portrayed by the chief actor.—Scientific American.

Why Trees Swell and Shrink.

Measurements with newly designed instruments have shown that tree trunks may not enlarge for many days or even weeks after leaves, flowers and branches have begun to grow. In the curious daily variation the trunk may be actually smaller in mid-afternoon than at sunrise. The sap is assumed to ascend in a kind of expanding and contracting hose of wood-cells, and, like a hose feeding an engine, this shrinks when the tree tends to draw up sap faster than formed and swells when the demand slackens.

FOX FARMS INCREASING

SUCCESSFUL UNDERTAKING NOW REPORTED IN MIDDLESEX.

Climate of Ontario Was Found to Be Suited to the Production of Rich Glossy Furs, Which Bring Excellent Prices—Over One Hundred Ranches Have Been Already Established.

In recent years many farmers have entered the fox ranching industry and to-day there are about one hundred small ranchers in the Province of Ontario, which provide climate favorable to the production of a rich glossy fur.

All domestic animals originally came under the control of man by appropriation from the wild state in time of need. As cattle, horses, sheep, and poultry have been domesticated, distributed to the far corners of the earth, and differentiated by careful breeding for specific purposes, so too will it be with the fur-bearing animals.

This fox breeding industry was first opened up in 1894 in Prince Edward Island, and to-day that province claims this as one of its chief and most profitable industries. In the early days of the industry about half a dozen Prince Edward Islanders started to monopolize the business and not even their families were enlightened as to their methods. The pelts were shipped three in a package by parcel post from a distant post office, and reports of the sales had been received in code. Presently neighbors noted the improvement in the financial condition of these people and desired to participate.

Disclosure of the 1910 sales in which as high as $2,624 was realized for one pelt was the climax of the first stage in the development of fox farming. Some even mortgaged their farms in order to enter the industry. Prices for breeding stock advanced so wildly that one ranchman sold his first pair of cubs for $750 and other pairs successively for $3,000, $12,000, $13,000, and $14,000. In 1914, the speculative operations which were really unhealthy for the industry were dropped and prices were put on a better level.

In order to successfully raise foxes it is well to study their disposition and habits in the wild state. The death rate among the wild ones is lower than among any other fur bearers. The average life span of a fox is similar to that of a dog, being from nine to sixteen years.

The average range of a wild fox seldom exceeds a five-mile circle in a life time, although a hound has been known to drive them sixty miles in a bee line. A female fox will raise her pups every season of her life within a mile of the same spot and preferably in the same den year after year. For pups are usually born in April and the average number is four. Occasionally there are litters of eight or nine pups.

Wild foxes pair in January and continue to associate together until the pups are practically full grown. The old foxes, however, hunt together more or less throughout the year.

In winter, foxes have a hard time to get food, with the deep snow and cold weather they are forced to eat anything they can get; old carcasses, bones, frozen apples, varied occasionally with a rabbit or partridge. When they make a kill they gorge themselves and it is surprising the amount they will put out of sight. They scarcely average a square meal a week through January. During the autumn when game, nuts and berries are plentiful they get plump and round but by February they have lost more than one-third of their October weight and are very lank and thin. The full-grown wild male fox averages less than ten pounds in weight. Ten to eleven pounds is a giant. The females seldom reach nine pounds.

The stomach capacity is about eleven liquid ounces. Comparing these weights with the domesticated animals, we find the ones on the range much heavier, males having been known to reach twenty-five pounds. The stomach capacity of a range fox is from 16 to 18 ounces.

Every den in pup time shows the mother's specialty in hunting. Some are strong on rabbits, others woodchucks, some mice, but seldom poultry predominates. Less than 5 per cent. of the foxes ever taste poultry, although so many have blamed them for the disappearance of fowl.

The wild foxes almost invariably choose high ground for their den, with a southern or quartering south slope, among scatter ing trees and bushes, practically never in deep woods.

The type of fox that ranchers endeavor to produce is the silver black, which has the richest fur in the world and only four other really expensive furs can be considered competitors of this, the sea otter, Russian sable, Alaska seal, and Chinchilla.

Fox ranching is apparently a young man's industry, and when the great war broke out in 1914, many who had entered the work enlisted and thus it was neglected. Others, becoming discouraged at the drop in prices, disposed of their stock, but the men who kept on were the ones who became successful and reaped big profits.

One of the largest fox ranches in Ontario is that of John W. Graham, concession 3, Lobo Township, Middlesex County; about one mile from the village of Komoka. Mr. Graham attributes his success to three factors selective breeding, good site, and careful study of the animals.

In selecting a fox, Mr. Graham states that it is necessary to consider the disposition and a good conformance indicates intelligence. A quiet eye is also an important feature.

War Medals.

More than 7,000,000 British war and victory medals have now been issued.

Our Tommies and Lady Nancy

Ladies who contemplate throwing their millinery into the political ring might take a tip from Lady Nancy Astor, M.P., for Plymouth in the British House of Commons, who recently visited Canada.

Thousands of Canadians who were overseas retain vivid recollections of Lady Nancy, on the Astor's country estate, "Cliveden," near Taplow on the Thames river, on whose estate the Duchess of Connaught's Canadian Red Cross Hospital was situated, using expressions like "Slosh it a mile," and cutting capers at ball games staged by the Canadian Overseas League back in '16.

As a baseball rooter and side line coach, Lady Astor had the ordinary run of professionals stopped dead. She was the liveliest spectator and among the noisiest at times on the grounds, to the delight of Canucks and the highly amused Imperial Tommies who were patients at the hospital.

Lady Nan knew all the baseball jargon up to that season, and, as she frequently has proven on the floor of the House since then, she possessed a shrewd and witty tongue and could coin a catchy phrase immediately, to add to the standard ball game banter. She could wield a wicked tongue at the opposition team, but, being a good sport, she was more inclined to encourage the "home" players.

Military red tape, brass hat pomposity and army regimentation, which she was continually in contact must have palled heavily on Lady Nan's impetuous spirits and sprightly unconventionality. At any rate, she chose to go the limit in ball game capers to the delight of the Tommies, at one of the final league games in 1916, between Taplow and Orpington teams. Distinguished visitors came down from London for the occasion. Members of the headquarters staff, including Gen. Turner, were there. A string orchestra was provided and there was a flag decked marquee refreshment tent on the lawn. Hospital staff and patients in khaki and "blues" crowded the field in hundreds.

Mighty cheers greeted Lady Astor just before the game when she began to distribute scores of big megaphones to the Taplow supporters. She pressed several, upon swagger staff officers who by rights should have remained strictly neutral spectators. She used her own megaphone with tremendous effect the entire nine innings, and it transpired that she developed more fun and enthusiasm and created more noise than any other fan present.

She pranced excitedly and nimbly along the base line, yelling encouragement and jibes through her megaphone. She was certainly the life of the big party. Unfortunately the Taplow team lost the game, but it wasn't for want of distinguished encouragement.

While Lady Astor's ardent love for baseball and her frolicksome capers at Taplow games may be remembered most outstandingly by Canadians who were patients there, they will recall as well, her kindly interest and sympathy for the wounded and her untiring and devoted efforts toward cheering the men who lay suffering for months in the wards. She paid daily visits to the hospital, distributing cigarettes, chocolates, fruit and great armfuls of flowers and her own gardens and conservatories. She knew scores of the two thousand or more patients by name and had a cheery word for all of them.

Besides superintending the big estate in the absence of her husband who occupied an important War Office post and who seldom came to Cliveden, she entertained distinguished hospital visitors, arranged amusements and entertainments for the patients and occasionally held levees at Cliveden House—a castle in size—for the staff and "up" patients.

The estate itself was an inspiration to recovery for scarred wounded, many of whom came almost direct from the trenches to the big hospital. Cliveden was previously the property of the Earl of Somers, and the Dukes of Westminster and is one of the most magnificent modern mansions in the heart of the Thames river country estate section, in all England. A walk through the wooded park land surrounding the mansion revealed beautiful and interesting statuary groups, monuments and memorials and quaint stone chapels and bridges. The great fountain at the head of the main drive was reputed to have cost half a million dollars, and the statue surmounting the clock tower at one side of the main wings of the house was said to be of solid gold. Cliveden was a revelation of beauty and grandeur to the colonial troops who were fortunate enough to have their "Blighty" attended to there.

Probably the scores of tin huts comprising the big hospital have long since been torn down and the ground smoothed and sodded, but Cliveden will remain for all time a sacred reminder of those unhappy and happy war days in the little Canadian cemetery converted into a resting place for Canadians who "went West" at Taplow, from the sunken Italian garden, one of the beauty features of the estate.

Canadians who knew Lady Astor have followed her political career with keen interest and they must smile knowingly when cable despatches describe her parliamentary sallies, recalling her impulsive and amusing baseball antics back in the war years.—Toronto Sunday World.

Wasted Water.

It is estimated that something over 100,000,000 gallons of water per day are wasted in connection with the domestic supplies of the water unders takings in Britain.

SUNNY ALGIERS.

One of the Brightest Spots in the World.

"Why not Algiers?" asks Mr. MacCallum Scott, M.P., writing in Sunday at Home.

"When fogs hang over London, when mists and rain and sleet drive us indoors in England, the northern shores of Africa are bathed in brilliant sunshine, the sky is a deep turquoise, the Mediterranean is a sheet of purple, azure, and emerald, and the land is gay with flowers, and orange groves and palms. At Christmas one may pluck the ripe oranges and lemons from the trees. In January the scents of spring are already in the air. Almond blossoms deck the hillside. In the eucalyptus woods there is a continual bursting of flower pods and pattering of husks, diffusing their balsam on every side. The Bougainvillea trails its purple tresses over wall and hedgerow, and the mimosa pours down in cascades of gold.

"The Riviera is a favorite resort of those who flee the English winter; but the opposite shore of the Mediterranean, the Barbary coast, except in regard to the Casino at Monte Carlo, outvies all its attractions. The climate is warmer, and more constant, and the vegetation more tropical. The mistral wind, which is the bane of the Riviera, never blows. The scenery is more varied, more picturesque, and more wildly romantic.

"The native quarter of Algiers, the Kashbah, as it is called, is a veritable museum of Oriental and African life and customs. The streets are an intricate labyrinth of narrow passages lined by forbidding, windowless walls, and overhung by projecting upper stories which almost shut the sky. Sometimes through a hastily opened doorway one may catch a glimpse of a courtyard full of color. The walls are pierced at intervals by the entrances to dark, cave-like, little shops, where sit the owners plying their hereditary crafts of tailor or tinsmith worker or slipper-maker. The streets are thronged by a motley crowd of Arabs, Moors, Turks, Jews, Kabyles, and Berber tribesmen, among whom the swarthy Sicilians and Spaniards seem quite at home.

"The costumes are as varied and picturesque as the races. Red, purple, blue, and white burnouses, fezes, and turbans of all sizes and colors, attract the eye. Veiled women flit about like shested spectres. Scarcely a European dress is to be seen.

"It is all so strange and alien that a timid visitor might be pardoned for feeling nervous about venturing into this native hive. But there is no danger. The people are law-abiding and courteous to strangers. And there is a simple clue to the labyrinth which seems at first so confusing. If one keeps walking uphill one arrives at last at the Kashan fortress and the palace of the Dey, at the very apex of the pyramid-shaped town, from which a century ago the rulers of the pirate state could watch their corsairs returning with booty across the Mediterranean. If one turns one's footsteps downhill one returns again to the Parisian boulevards, with their gay cadets and shops, which surround the harbor."

Your 1,000 Miles of Cotton.

How much wool does the average person use? Every inch of cloth contains about twenty-five threads running downwards and the same number running across it, so that a square yard is made up of 1,800 threads, each a yard in length.

To simplify calculations we may assume that every yard contains a mile of wool yarn. The average suit or costume needs four square yards of cloth, so that every man or woman wears something like four miles of wool. Allowing two sets of clothes a year, we find that each of us uses four hundred miles of wool in fifty years.

When we come to linen and cotton goods, with eighty or one hundred threads each way to the inch, the total length of thread becomes appalling. A single handkerchief may contain 2,400 strands, each fifteen inches long, so that 3,000 yards of cotton thread are required to make it. A shirt represents about three miles of thread. In fifty years every one of us uses anything from 500 to 1,000 miles of cotton.

Brightest Lighthouse.

New lamps are being fitted to certain of the lighthouses round the coast of the British Isles. Meanwhile the engineers and experts attached to Trinity House are evolving a new formula for estimating the candle-power of the lights, which involves a revision of the strength of the beam lights. In the circumstances, officials at Trinity House are unable to state which is the most powerful lighthouse in the British Isles. There are only three the lights of which are produced by electricity—St. Catherine's, the Lizard and South Foreland. The remainder, over 60, are worked by oil, and every year they consume 145,000 gallons of paraffin. A strong light of 490,000 candle-Power alone absorbs nearly 4,000 gallons of oil.

Thermalene.

Thermalene, discovered by Karl Wolf, of Zurich, is an intimate mixture of acetylene and liquefied oils, and is claimed to have important advantages over other gases for producing high temperatures. It is somewhat heavier than air, has a specific heat a little over one-eighth of that of acetylene, and at room temperature is liquefied by a pressure of 1,500 to 1,600 lbs. per square inch. A notable peculiarity is a soft, sweet, inoffensive odor. In welding, few sparks are thrown off; it can be used at relatively low pressure, it produces no corrosive or poisonous effects, and is not liable to cause explosion.

A Family Failing.

Mr. Hay: "I wonder what makes our son William so restless?"

Mrs. Hay: "Oh, most of our Bills are unsettled!"

Curtain Calls Are Discussed

There is proceeding in the English press a discussion as to whether the curtain calls in the theatres should be abolished. Those in favor of it seem to have the better arguments, which does not imply that this nuisance is about to be abolished, for the great majority of actors and actresses are in favor of it. In fact, we rather suspect that the great majority of actors and actresses, if they happened to be Ophelias or Juliets or Hamlets, would rise from their gory beds and bow smugly to the audience and showed by applause that it appreciated the deep damnation of their taking off and the art with which reality was represented. It is obviously impossible to prevent audiences signifying their appreciation of a fine bit of acting, and, since the performers are just as human as the audiences, it is inevitable that they should desire to show their gratification. Now and then managers and producers have been able to enforce a law against curtain calls, but, as a rule, everybody concerned in them is so happy that only the judicious, always in a minority, grieve.

A correspondent of a London paper says that thirty years ago he wrote to his friend, Henry Irving, to protest against his habit of responding to curtain calls between the acts. Irving said that he responded to them against his will and out of deference to an old-established theatrical custom. There are occasions, a good deal rarer than people would have us believe, when the enthusiasm of an audience is so terrible that no rules on the part of the management could withstand it. We have all read how the pit rose at Edmund Kean, and the prolonged tempests of applause which frequently greeted Booth, Salvini, Davenport and McCullough would have made it impossible for the plays to proceed had they not been acknowledged in some way. When an actor or actress makes such an impression upon an audience that it is carried away by enthusiasm, it seems only fair to subsequent audiences that the fact should be known.

But all of us who attend the theatre have seen for one demonstration of spontaneous enthusiasm a dozen carefully-organized demonstrations that merely interrupted the performance and tended to make it even worse than it was. The claque is a French institution, but has spread to England and to the United States, where, on the occasion of a first night, the manager is as careful to have his gang of hand-clappers properly stationed as his corps of ushers. It is to be presumed that the lusty efforts of these cheer-leaders have before now made a poor play successful. After all, what one finds in a theatre is illusion and the illusion that a play profoundly stirs other people is but one more provided by a claque of people who applaud for so much a night. A well-established theatrical convention, we may mention, is that anybody who enters on a pass is supposed to applaud.

To claque-ing the claque appears to be an accepted institution. It is defended on the ground that most of the people who go to grand opera do not understand when applause may appropriately be given into the proceedings. One might feel oneself ravished by a certain passage of music, and yet to yield to the temptation and burst into noisy approbation would be to mar a subsequent passage about to begin. So the claque offers valuable guiding. It indicates when the bravas and hussas and whatever other exotic cheers seem to fit the occasion may appropriately be indulged in. The practice serves to protect the singers from being ignorantly interrupted, and also offers a safeguard to the rest of the audience that well-intentioned bursts of enthusiasm will not drown the supreme efforts of the singers.

If every play were a perfectly-written play there would be no need for curtain calls or claques. The theory is that the greatest moment of a play should be its last moment. That was the case in "A Bill of Divorcement," which is the best new play and the best acted that is likely to visit Toronto in the next twenty years. There had been a perfect crescendo of emotion which reached its height as the curtain fell. It would have been appropriate for the audience to remain silent for a moment after the final drop and then to arise and cheer for ten minutes. But there are few perfectly-written plays. Most of them have their great moments in the first act. If one does not then recall the actors he will not have a subsequent opportunity.—McAree in the Toronto Mail and Empire.

A Sudden Release.

The rector was sitting in his study hard at work on the following Sunday's sermon when a visitor was announced. She was a hard, muscular-looking woman, and when the minister set a chair for her she said, somewhat brusquely, "You are Mr. Jenkins, ain't you?" "I am," replied the good man. "Well, maybe you'll remember o' marryin' 'a couple of stfangers at your church a month ago?" "What are the names?" asked the minister. "Peter Simpson and Eliza Brown," replied the woman, "and I'm Eliza." "Are you, indeed?" said the minister. "I think I remember—" "Yes," interrupted the visitor. "I'm her all right, an' I thought as how I ought to drop in an' tell you that Peter's escaped."

In Legal Phraseology.

Bartholomew Davey was proud of his library. "Yes," he explained to one of his friends, as he showed him into the library room, "I take great pride in my books. Whenever I find one of them with a torn leaf I put it through a legal process." "What legal process?" the visitor asked. "I have it bound over to keep the piece."

SAVED HER FROM AN OPERATION

So Thinks Mrs. Tracey of Ontario, Regarding Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Knightington, Ontario.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the change of life for troubles that women often have at that time. I had not been well for a year and was not really able to do my work. A friend who had taken the Vegetable Compound herself recommended it to me and I think its use saved me from an operation. I highly recommend it to all women who have troubles like mine, and am willing for you to use my testimonial."—Mrs. DANIEL J. TRACEY, Knightington, Ontario.

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But the more common ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

When disturbing symptoms first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles.

County Judge's Criminal Court Cases.
In the County Judge's Criminal Court held at Napanee on Friday, June 23rd, 1922, before His Honor Judge Madden, Fred Johnston was found guilty of theft and sentenced to three years in Kingston penitentiary. On a charge of escaping from gaol he received a sentence of one year in the penitentiary, the sentences not to run concurrently. The 8 crimes for which Johnston was convicted was the theft of clothing and boots from the boarding camp of the men who were engaged in paving Dundas street last August. Johnston was committed for trial on this charge by the Police Magistrate, and while awaiting trial he escaped from the goal, and was arrested last week in Kingston, and now goes back there to serve four years for his offenses.
In the same court J. H. Ferris, charged with theft, was honorably acquitted, and the complainant, H. Forbes, of Kaladar, was bound over to keep the peace for two years in the sum of $500 and $1000, and ordered to pay all the costs of the court.

Keep your Lawns Tidy but do not put the Refuse on the Street.
The Streets Committee of the town have pretty well cleaned most of the streets of the town and made them look very nice, but no sooner has the job been completed than residents begin to dispose of rubbish, lawn grass and small twigs off the trees and lawns, to say nothing of other refuse, by dumping it on the streets. It may seem all right to those people to have their premises look nice and neat, and have a dumping ground on the road in front of their nicely kept property. This is a practice which will have to be stopped, or some resident will appear in police court to answer for his misdemeanor. There are still some properties in the town which might be greatly improved in appearance if the owners care to spend a short time cutting the weeds. The town has a weed by-law and it may also have to be enforced if residents refuse to do their duty. The town of Napanee could look ed prettier than it does right now, and all residents should have enough of the spirit of citizenship to help in keeping the town clean and attractive. Citizens should also remember that it costs the town good money to keep the streets fairly clean and the more rubbish the Streets Committee have to cart away the more money the tax payer has to dig up. Throwing papers on the streets is also another nuisance that will have to be attended to.

Big celebration at Napanee on Monday, July 3rd. 3 ball games, $1300.00 in horse races, big dance in the armouries at night. Come and bring your friends.

Dr .Shorey's Retirement.
The many friends of Rev. Dr. Shorey, of Napanee, will regret to learn that he has decided to retire from the active ministry of the Methodist Church, after a service of 49 years, and will now be on the superannuated list. Rev. Dr. Shorey has been one of the most successful and popular ministers in the Bay of Quinte Conference, and his retirement will be generally regretted. He had two successful pastorates in the Cambridge St. Methodist Church, and has a very warm place in the hearts of our citizens.—Lindsay Post, June 24th.

Help the Boy Scouts.
It is safe to say that no organization at the present day, outside of the schools and churches, is doing more for the welfare of the boy than that known as the Boy Scouts Association. The Napanee Troop is making splendid progress under the very competent leadership of H. Leigh Babcock, and deserves public support and encouragement. The boys will have a Tag Day on July 3rd, and as this is the first time they have appealed for assistance they are hoping for a sympathetic response. They have been working for a long time with almost no balance of funds on hand, and now they need to raise their appointment for headquarters to defray the expenses of their proposed camp, and to provide some necessary equipment for the troop.

JASPER PARK LODGE

AN IDEAL STOP-OFF POINT

With the advent of reduced fares to Alberta and British Columbia points, many who have long anticipated seeing the Canadian Rockies and Pacific Coast will make the journey this year. To them, and to the individual travelling "Across Canada" for purely business reasons, the "National Way" and the Canadian National Railways' premier trains, the "Continental Limited" and the "National" appeal most strongly, the route connecting as it does the great urban centres of Canada, and traversing regions of outstanding interest. The various Canadian National hostelries en route suggest excellent stop-off points and are noted for the excellence of their service. To their number is added this year Jasper Park Lodge on Lac Beauvet.
Jasper Park, Alberta, in the Canadian Rockies, is the largest of Canada's National Parks. Its area of 4,400 square miles offering unlimited holiday possibilities to the Tourist and Sportsman. Dolley Varden trout lurk in the clear pure mountain streams. Beautiful transparent lakes mirror the encircling mountains, and a new unspoiled Alpine wonderland of snow-crowned peaks and verdant valleys gladdens the eye. In this delightful setting on Lac Beauvert, three miles from Jasper Station (with which it is connected by motor car service), is Jasper Park Lodge, operated by the Canadian National Railways' Hotel Department, and now open for the reception of guests.
Of artistic log construction, the Lodge comprises a large, comfortable Lounge building, surrounded by Dining Hall and separate Sleeping buildings, each containing sitting-room and four bedrooms, electric lighted, with all modern conveniences, running water in each room, baths, etc. In conjunction with the Lodge is a Dancing Pavilion where good music assures to the guests delightful evening diversion.
From the Lodge a magnificent panorama greets the eye. Mount Edith Cavel, so-called in memory of the martyred British Red Cross Nurse, stands out in bold relief, its glinting slopes making it to appear as "a sheet suspended from the heavens." The picturesque valley of the Athabaska is flanked by Pyramid Mountain, the richness of its varied color effects presenting a very striking contrast. Whistlers Mountain, Colon Range, Roche Bonhomme, are but a few of the mighty peaks that meet the gaze. Riding is, of course the popular pastime and ponies are available for this exhilarating sport. Within easy reach of the Lodge, afoot or by motor car, are numerous points of interest. Maligne Canon and Gorge, one of the most interesting attractions in the Park, is but six miles distant. Easily accessible streams will tempt the fisherman. The amateur photographer will revel in Nature's bounteousness. Animal, bird and plant life is found in wonderful variety. Seventy different species of birds, seven hundred different species of plants and flowers have been accounted for, and within the confines of the Park (which is a bird and game preserve) are big horn mountain sheep and goat, bear-cinnamon, brown and black ; caribou and moose, elk, beaver, otter, marten and deer.
For those more venturesome, who would explore the more difficult and extended trails, guides, ponies, pack-horses and complete outfits can be obtained at the Lodge, from which point also parties set out on hunting expeditions beyond the confines of the Park.
This delightful region is fully described in a new booklet entitled "Jasper Park Lodge," copies of which may be obtained from the nearest Canadian National or Grand Trunk Agent. 30-b

TREASURE HUNT ENDED

Supposed Jesuit Chest Is a Big Flat Rock.

Diver Reported That He Could Find Nothing at the Bottom of the Wye River Except Stone and Search That Lasted for Ten Days Has Been Abandoned.

PENETANGUISHENE, Ont., June 26.—The hunt for the Jesuit treasure chest, which legend reported to be buried in the mud of the Wye River, is over. After battling bravely with the mud and sand of the river's bed for ten days, in an effort to recover the "priceless gold altar vessels given by the Court of Louis le Grande to the struggling mission of Huronia and lost one panicky night when the black-robed missionaries and their followers were forced to evacuate the fort and seek refuge upon the wide breadth of the river," the treasure hunters found they were spending their good money and time to recover a stone.

Just what this stone contains is a subject for discussion which can be debated without end. According to the Jeffrey divining rod, it should be composed of gold, copper, iron, with a trace of silver. If such is the case, it is a geological curio. But no matter what it may be considered, it is still at the bottom of the river. The treasure hunters did not consider it worth while to expend further money in bringing it up. Captain Robert Turcon, who has been in charge of the dredging operations, made a descent at noon Friday and armed with a probe and scraper went about the "treasure" viciously. After he had cleared away a few feet of silt and sand he came up and delivered a report, which effectively dampened the treasure hunters' spirits. "It's a rock," he said, "about six feet long and three feet wide. I don't know how deep it is, because I couldn't get to the bottom of it."

Thus ended the treasure hunt, which from it is presumed historical importance and romance has a unique niche in the history of all quests of such a nature. Not even the recent search staged in an effort to recover the fabulous gold cache supposed to have been buried by Captain Kidd on the Atlantic Coast has aroused such interest and comment. The fact, ending in a stone, what tame, the spirits of some of the treasure syndicate are not dampened. At least two of them believe that beneath the rock lies the real box. Whether they will spend more money on a still hunt for the Jesuit "will-o'-the wisp" remains to be seen. But in the meantime the rock and such things as it may conceal remains in the river's bottom. It will cost both time and money to remove it. And the mud is seeping in at the rate of two feet every 12 hours. Therefore, it will only take five days for the 20-foot hole, due to reveal the rock, to fill in completely and thereby remove all trace of the activities of the treasure hunters in the bed of the Wye river.

Blame Coal Company.

HERRIN, Ill., June 26.—Entire responsibility for the murder of nineteen non-union workers and two union miners, resulting from the riots and massacre at a strip mine near here last Wednesday and Thursday, was laid upon officials of the Southern Illinois Coal Company, mentioned specifically by name, in the verdict rendered by a coroner's jury here.

The portion of the verdict on this point reads: "We, the jury, find from the deaths of the deceased that the deaths were due to the acts, direct and indirect, of the officials of the Southern Illinois Coal Company. We recommend that investigation be conducted for the purpose of fixing the blame upon the individuals responsible."

The jury contained three union miners, for whom one was foreman. The other three members of the jury were business men of Williamson county.

Hickory.

Hickory, with its unrivaled strength, elasticity and resiliency, is used for tool handles, for the spokes of automobile wheels, for golf clubs, and for many other purposes. There is increasingly keen competition among the industries for this wood, although there are still 15,734,000,000 board feet standing throughout the country. Manufacturers have to go farther for their supply, and really select stock is already very hard to obtain in the required quantities.—Scientific American Magazine.

DROWNED DURING RACE.

Toronto Boy Died When War Canoe Capsized.

TORONTO, June 26.—Seized with heart failure when capsized from a war canoe at the finishing buoy during the Parkdale Canoe Club's regatta on Saturday afternoon Harold Skidmore, aged 19, of Humber Bay, a member of the Humber Bay war canoe crew, was drowned. Arthur Orr, coxswain of the Humber Bay canoe, was the only one who saw the young man drown, and he was so exhausted by grappling with Skidmore as he became absolutely speechless that he reached shore and had recovered somewhat. Orr, an excellent swimmer, was pulled to the bottom of the lake by Skidmore, and had great difficulty in saving himself. The body of the unfortunate youth was brought from a depth of 35 feet after an hour's diligent dragging in a rough sea by the life-savers. Artificial respiration was resorted to by members of the competing clubs, and Dr. Casserly, but without avail.

The race in which the Humber Bay crew competed had nine entrants. The lake was rough, and all of the competitors had trouble on the out stretch, by their respective crafts shipping water. The Humber Bay boat was half full of water by the time it rounded the first buoy, and on the homestretch Coxswain Orr ordered some of the crew to lie down in the bottom of the boat to steady it, while the rest of the paddlers paddled to the home buoy. Just as the Humber Bay craft slid over the finishing line in the wake of the Balmy Beach boat, which won the event, the Humber Bay craft capsized, spilling its crew into the water. For the moment it was every man for himself. Orr was not far from Skidmore when the overturning happened. He heard Skidmore cry out, and swam toward him. Skidmore caught hold of Orr by the legs as he was going down, thus taking the coxswain into the depths with him. After a struggle, Orr managed to free himself from Skidmore's grasp and bring the youth to the surface, but as he was trying to secure a better hold of his charge, Skidmore, grabbed him a second time and again took him to the bottom. For the second time, Orr managed to free himself. Exhausted by his struggle with the drowning youth, as he reached the surface he made for the empty launch which marked the finishing line. So exhausted was he when he that he had to grasp the launch to save himself. He was taken from the water by the rescuers, but was unable to tell of the tragedy until he reached the boathouse and had recovered his speech. E. A. Apted, an official of the Parkdale Club, investigated the accident, and it was decided that Skidmore's death was due to heart failure, consequent of the shock of the chill water on his heated body.

SIR GEORGE PARKIN DEAD.

Eminent Imperialist Was Well-Known In Canada.

LONDON, June 26. — Sir George Robert Parkin, the famous educationist and imperialist, died in London on the Imperial Federation, died on Sunday at his home in Chelsea Court.

News of Sir George Parkin's death came as a shock to his relatives in Toronto and to the wide circle of people in Canada who enjoyed his friendship. He was widely known throughout Ontario, not only by reason of the outstanding attainments of his career, but also because of the many personal contacts established during his several years of residence and frequent subsequent visits there.

From 1894 to 1902 he held the position of principal of Upper Canada College and during that time shaped the early development of scores of men now occupying promfnent positions in the life of Toronto and the province. To his former students he was fondly endowed an esteemed personal friend, as well as a respected former head master.

The fine avenue of trees which now leads up to Upper Canada College and the gardens in the college grounds are a monument to his great love of the beautiful in nature. These were planted by him and the gardens laid out during his regime as principal.

The present principal of Upper Canada, Mr. W. L. Grant, is a son-in-law of Sir George's. Mrs. Grant is in England at the present time with her father, who is very ill. She died. Mrs. Vincent Massey and Mrs. James Macdonnell, of Toronto, are also daughters, while another daughter, Mrs. Wimpuris, a son, Raleigh, now attending Baliol College, Oxford, and Lady Parkin, reside in England.

One of the achievements of Sir George Parkin's career was his work as organizing representative of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust, in which he was engaged after leaving Upper Canada College in 1902 until his retirement in 1920. As a tribute to his great work, Rhodes scholars in Canada some years presented him with a portrait of himself done by F. H. Varley, of Toronto.

RATHENAU WAS SLAIN

German Foreign Minister Victim of Assassins.

Brilliant Leader Who Has Been Called "The Wizard of the German Empire" Was Riddled With Bullets, and Government Fears That Further Violence Will Follow.

BERLIN, June 26.—Dr. Walter Rathenau, German Foreign Minister, and more closely identified than any other German with the efforts of rehabilitation of his country since the war, was shot and killed by two or more unknown assassins, while on his way from his residence Saturday morning to the Foreign Office.

The Minister was subjected to a veritable hail of bullets, one of them striking him in the throat and passing upward to the brain; while others struck him in various parts of the body. Hand grenades also were thrown, almost wrecking the car in which Dr. Rathenau was riding and inflicting further injuries on the Minister.

Chancellor Wirth's Government is marshalling the nation's liberal elements to the defence of the young German republic, and organized labor, represented in both Socialist parties, is again first to buckle on the armor, just as it did during the Kapp revolt. Announcement is made that the Government will establish extraordinary courts for the trial of National Plotters, and that a state of emergency for Prussia will be proclaimed.

All regimental reunions and militaristic demonstrations have to be prohibited. Yet, despite vociferous cries of "Long Live the Republic," which resounded through the Reichstag Chamber at the close of a memorial session to Rathenau, thoughtful men of all ranks and parties were silently but gravely, apprehensive for the nation's fate.

The emotion which marked the brief addresses of Chancellor Wirth and President Ebert before the Reichstag reflected sentiments which were shared by many others, while the sloting of the radicals throughout what has to have been a decorous memorial to the dead Foreign Minister, reflected the feeling of unrelenting vengeance vowed in behalf of the German proletariat.

Never did the Reichstag witness such scenes of turbulence and disorder. Hugo Heifferich, the Nationalist leader, who had attacked Dr. Rathenau in a savage speech in the Reichstag the day before his death, sat curled up in his seat far to the right of the House. He appeared to be in a very depressed and somewhat fearful state.

The uproar was primarily aimed at Helferich, whom the Socialists and Communists wanted to force out of the Chamber through cries of "Murderer, assasin!"

Chancellor Wirth recalled Rathenau's words to Prince, expressing the conviction that the dead Minister's sentiments, as expounded in the presence of the allied leaders, foreshadowed a new era of international reconciliation." He praised him for having pointed out a path which would lead to the world's economic restoration.

The General Federation of Trades Unions, at a meeting in Leipsic Sunday, proclaimed a 24-hour strike throughout Germany next Tuesday, with the purpose of manifesting the determination of labor to combat reaction.

The prefect of police raised the offer of reward for the capture of Dr. Walter Rathenau's assassin to one million marks.

It is believed by the police that the assassins were former army officers members of a monarchist and secret political organization of reactionary character, as was in the case in the murder of Erzberger.

A Berlin dispatch to the Lokal Anzeiger says the political upheaval which is being predicted on both sides was the clash in the Reichstag, where fist fights were narrowly spared.

As soon as he heard of the tragic news, Edward Bernstein, socialist leader, declared it was his belief that "Helferich, you are the assassin!"

Dr. Karl Helfferich is the Nationalist leader in the Reichstag, and when three Socialists bore down on him and threatened violence, Helfferich was forced to flee the chamber. It looked for a moment as though there would be a free-for-all fight and only the commands of Chancellor Wirth prevented it.

Helfferich attacked Dr. Rathenau, condemning the former's reparations policy and the attitude toward the enforcement of Rhineland and the Saar Valley.

Following the movement of the Socialists to declare a general strike, Communists in some quarters were demanding the immediate arming of the workmen to resist monarchist reaction.

By an amazing piece of luck, Dr. Rathenau's sister, who was with him at the time he was the target of a fusilade of bullets, escaped unharmed. The aim of the assassins was perfect and this fact supports the theory that the gunmen were former army officers and other militarist realms.

Dr. Rathenau at all times made clear the hatred which he held for the Royalist party. At one time he is quoted as saying that the war was caused by cowardice and continued:

"The Kaiser rattled his saber until he frightened himself and all of his Ministers out of their normal judgment."

Of Jewish birth, Dr. Rathenau was styled "The Wizard of the German Empire." It was his extraordinary power of organization and business efficiency which kept the army shooting" when the blockade had shut off the importation of raw materials during the war.

Canoeing of the canoe on Lake Ramsey during a heavy blow Donald Bisaonette, aged eight, was drowned.

Pro-Treaty Party Wins.

DUBLIN, June 26.—Complete returns in the elections for a new Parliament in Southern Ireland show that the body will be made up of 58 pro-treaty representatives, 36 anti-treaty representatives, 17 Laborites, 7 farmers' candidates, 4 independents and 4 members from Trinity College.

Although the meeting of Parliament is only a week off and though the need for a combination to resist disorders is still urgent, both factions point out that nothing has been done toward forming the proposed coalition cabinet.

WEBSTER —MAN'S MAN

By Peter B. Kyne

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," Etc.

Copyright by Peter B. Kyne

To begin, Don Juan Cafetero was not his real name, but rather a free Spanish translation of the Gaelic, John Cafferty. Mr. Cafferty was an exile of Erin with a horrible thirst. He had first arrived in Sobrante some five years before, as section boss in the employ of the little foreign-owned narrow-gauge railway which ran from Buenaventura on the Caribbean coast to San Miguel de Padua, up-country where the nitrate beds were located. Prior to his advent the railroad people had tried many breeds of section boss without visible results, until a Chicago man, who had come to Sobrante to install an inter-communicating telephone system in the government buildings, suggested to the superintendent of the road, who was a German, that the men made for bosses come from Erin's isle; wherefore Mr. Cafferty had been imported at a price of $5 a day gold. Result—a marked improvement in the road bed and consequently the train schedules, and the ultimate loss of the Cafferty soul.

Something in the climate of Sobrante must have appealed to a touch of laissez faire in Don Juan's amiable nature, for in the course of time he had taken unto himself, without bell or book, after the fashion of the proletariat of Sobrante, the daughter of one Esteban Manuel Enrique Jose Maria Pasqual y Miramontes, an estimable peon who was singularly glad to have his daughter off his hands and no questions asked. Following the fashion of the country, however, Esteban had forthwith moved the remainder of his numerous progeny under the mantle of Don Juan Cafetero's philanthropy, and resigned a position which for many years he had not enjoyed—to-wit: salting and packing green hides at a local abattoir. This foolhardy economic move had so incensed Don Juan that in a fit of pique he spurned his father-in-law (we must call Esteban something and so why split hairs?) under the tails of his camisa, with such vigor as to sever forever the friendly relations hitherto existing between the families. Mrs. Cafferty (again we inquire, but what of it?) subsequently passed away in child birth, and no sooner had she been decently buried than Don Juan took a week off to drown his sorrows.

In this condition he encountered Esteban Manuel Enrique Jose Maria Pasqual y Miramontes and [illegible] out of his name. In the altercation that ensued Esteban, fully convinced that he had received the ne plus ultra of the transcendental, set to to finish, cut Don Juan severely; Don Juan had thereupon slain Esteban with a .44-caliber revolver and upon emerging from the railroad hospital a month later had been haled before a Sobrantean magistrate and fined the sum of $20,000, legal tender of the republic of Sobrante. Of course, he had paid it off within six months from his wages as section boss, but the memory of the injustice always rankled him, and gradually he moved down the scale of society from section boss to day laborer, day laborer to tropical tramp, and tropical tramp to beach combor, in which latter state he had now existed for several months.

To return to Mother Jenks.

Before Don Juan could even utter a meaningful grunt Mother Jenks had finger to lip and silenced him. "Go back to Leber's and return in an hour," she whispered. "I have my reasons for wantin' that bloomin' cablegram delivered later."

Don Juan hadn't the least idea what Mother Jenks' reasons might be, but he presumed she was up to some chicanery, and so he winked his bloodshot eye very knowingly and nodded his comprehension in the program.

When he had gone, Mother Jenks went behind the bar and fortified herself with her morning's morning—which rite having been performed, her sleep-benumbed brain livened up immediately.

"Gord's truth!" the lady murmured "An' me about to turn him adrift for the lawst fortnight! Well for 'im 'e allers hadn't the picture o' my sainted Emery as was the spittin' image of his own favorite Evelyn 'Ell's bells! But mait was a bit of a tight squeak! Just as I'm fully convinced 'e's best it an' I'm left 'oldin' the sack, all along o' my kindness of 'eart, ye see, the cablegram 'e likes lookin' for this two months past; as 'e allers claimed as 'ow any time 'e got a cablegram it'd be an answer to 'is letter, with money to follow! My word but that was a close an' a lawst!

Still congratulating herself upon her good fortune in intervening Don Juan Cafetero, Mother Jenks proceeded upstairs to her chamber, clothed herself, and shortly thereafter the kitchen. After giving orders for an extra special breakfast for two, Mother Jenks returned to her cantina, and formally opened the same for the business of that day and night.

To her came presently, via the tiled hallway, the object of her solicitude, a young man on the sunny side of thirty. He was thin for one of his height and breadth of chest; in color his countenance resembled that of a sick Chinaman. His hair was thick and wavy, but lusterless; his dark blue eyes carried a hint of jaundice; and a generous mouth, beneath an equally generous upper lip, gave ample ground for the suspicion that while Mr. William Geary's speech denoted him an American citizen, at least one of his maternal ancestors had been wooed and won by an Irishman. An old Panama hat, sad relic of a prosperous past, a pair of soiled duck shoes pumps, a suit of unbleached linen equally befouled, and last but not least, the remnants of a smile that much hard luck could never quite obliterate, completed his attire—and to one a stranger in the tropics would appear to constitute a complete inventory of Mr. Geary's possessions.

"Dulce corazon mio, I extend a greeting," he called at the entrance. "I trust you rested well last night, Mother Jenks, and that no evil dreams were born of your midnight repast of frijoles refritos, marmalade, and arf-an'-arf!"

"Chop yer spoofin', Willie," Mother Jenks simpered. "My heye! So I'm yer sweet'eart, eh? Yer wheedlin' blighter, makin' love to a girl as is old enough to be yer mother!"

"A woman," Mr. Geary retorted sagely and not a whit abashed, "is at the apex of her feminine charms at thirty-seven."

He knew his landlady to be not a day under fifty, but such is the ease with which the Irish scatter their blarney that neither Billy Geary nor Mother Jenks regarded this pretty speech in the light of an observation soberly, "an' there's only one human as 'ud cable me or write me by that name, Gord, Willie, wot's 'appened?"

"I'll read it to you, Mother."

Billy read the message aloud, and when he had finished, to his amazement, Mother Jenks laid her head on the table and began to weep.

CHAPTER V.

Without quite realizing why he did so, Billy decided that fear and not grief was at the bottom of the good creature's distress, and in his awkward, masculine way he placed his arm around Mother Jenks' shoulders, shook her gently, and bade her remember that things might right and go again, but he, the said William Geary, would remain her true and steadfast friend in any and all emergencies that might occur.

"Gor' bless yer heart, Willie," Mother Jenks sniffed. "I dunno wot in 'ell yer ever goin' to think o' me w'en I tell wot I've been up to this past fifteen year."

"Whatever you've been up to, Mother, it was a good and charitable deed—of that much I am certain." Billy replied loftily and—to his own surprise—sincerely.

"As Gord is my judge, Willie, it started out that w'y," moaned Mother Jenks, and she squeezed Billy's hand as if from that yellow, shaking member she would draw aid and comfort. "'Er nyme is Dolores Ruey. 'Er father was Don Ricardo Ruey, president av this blasted 'ell on earth w'en I first met 'er, my first cruise to Buenaventura. 'E was too good for the yeller-bellied beggars; 'e tried to do something for them an' run the government on the square, an' they couldn't understand it, so they 'ad 'im kyvin' been kicked an' cuffed by a long line of bloody rotters. It was Don Ricardo as gives my sainted 'Enery 'is commission as colonel in the hartillery.

"You've 'eard me tell," Mother Jenks continued, "ow the rebels got 'arf a dozen Hamerican gunners—deserters from the navy—an' blew 'Enery's battery to bits; 'ow the government forces fled upon Buenaventura, an' as 'ow w'en the dogs 'e gun to wonder if they mightn't lose, they quit by the 'undreds an' went over to the rebel side, leavin' Don Ricardo an' 'Enery an' mybe fifty o' the gentry in the palace. In coorse they fought to a finish; 'ristocrats, all of them, they 'ad to die fightin' or facin' a firin' squad."

Billy nodded. He had heard the tale before, including the recital of the sainted 'Enery's gallant dash from the blazing palace in an effort to save Don Ricardo's only child, a girl of seven, and of his capture and subsequent execution.

"That ended the revolution," Mother Jenks continued. "But 'ere's something I've never told a livin' soul, Shorty before 'Enery was hexecuted, 'e told me where 'e'd 'id the youngster—in a culvert out on the Malecon; so I 'ired a four-wheeler an' went out an' fight a wildcat."

"Oh, m'ybe 'e wouldn't!" Mother Jenks hastened to declare. "You know, Willie, I was present w'en they shot 'im, s-waitin' to claim 'is body. 'E kisses me good-bye, an' says he: 'Brace up, ol' girl. Remember your 'usband's been a sergeant in 'Er Majesty's Royal 'Orse artillery, an' don't let the bloody blighters see yer cry.' Then 'e walks out front, with 'is fine straight back to the wall, draws a circle on 'is blue tunic with white chalk an' says: 'Shoot at that, yer yeller-bellied bounders, an' be d——d to yer!'"

"To be the widow of such a gallant son of Mars," Billy declared, "is a greater honor than being the wife of a duke. Ah, Mother," he added with a note of genuine gratitude and sincerity, "you've been awfully good to me. I don't know what I'd have done without you." He laid his hand on her fat arm. "Mother, one of these days I'll get mine, and when I do I'm going to stake you to a nice little pub back in Bristol."

She smiled at him with motherly tenderness and shook her head. In a concrete niche in the mortuary of the Catedral de la Vera Cruz the bones of her sainted 'Enery reposed, and when her hour came she would lie beside him.

"Yer a sweet boy, Willie," she told him, "an' I'd trust yer for double the score, s'help me. 'Ev'ing knows I 'aven't much, but wot I 'ave I shares freely with them I likes."

Mother Jenks preceded him into the shady side of the veranda, where ordinarily she was wont to breakfast in solitary state. Her table was set for two this morning, however. Billy flipped an adventurous cockroach off the table and fell to with fine appetite.

He was dallying with a special brew of coffee, with condensed milk in it, when the Jamaica negro entered from the cantina to announce Don Juan Cafetero with a cablegram.

"A cablegram!" Mother Jenks cried. "Gord's truth! I'll wager the pub it's for you, Willie, Bob"—turning to the negro, and addressing him in her own private brand of Spanish—"give Don Juan a drink, if 'e 'asn't helped 'imself while yer back is turned, an' bring the cablegram 'ere."

Within the minute Bob returned with a long yellow envelope, which he handed Mother Jenks. Without so much as a glance at the superscription, she handed it to Billy Geary, who tore it open and read:

"Los Angeles, Cal., U. S. A., August 16, 1913.

"Henrietta Wilkins, Calle de Concordia, No. 19, Buenaventura, Sobrante, C. A.

"Leaving today to visit you. Will cable from New Orleans exact date arrival.

"The shadow of deep disappointment settled over Billy's face as he read. Mother Jenks noted it instantly.

"Wot's 'e got to s'y, Willie?" she demanded.

"It isn't a he. It's a she," Billy replied. "Besides, the cablegram isn't for me at all. It's for one Henrietta Wilkins, Calle de Concordia, No. 19, and who the devil Henrietta Wilkins may be is a mystery to me. Ever have any boarder by the name, Mother?"

Mother Jenks' red face had gone white. "'Enrietta Wilkins was my maiden nyme, Willie," she confessed soberly, "an' there's only one human as 'ud cable me or write me by that nyme, Gord, Willie, wot's 'appened?"

"I'll read it to you, Mother."

Billy read the message aloud, and when he had finished, to his amazement, Mother Jenks laid her head on the table and began to weep.

"That ended the revolution," Mother Jenks continued. "But 'ere's something I've never told a livin' soul, Shorty before 'Enery was hexecuted, 'e told me where 'e'd 'id the youngster—in a culvert out on the Malecon; so I 'ired a four-wheeler an' went out an' rescued the pore lamb. I 'id 'er until the harrival o' the next fruit steamer, w'en I shipped 'er to New Orleans in care o' the stewardess. I'll 'ave to put in the Catholic convent there, for as 'Enery said: 'Enrietta, keep an eye on the little nipper, an' do yer dammdest to see she's raised a lydy. 'Er father was a gentleman, an' you never want to forget 'e made you Mrs. Colonel Jenks.' So I'ave made a lydy out o' her, Willie; education, pianner lessons, paintin', singin', an' deportment. After she graduated from the convent, I 'ad her to live with me at the University o' California—New Orleans wasn't 'oddity for 'er, an' she needed a change o' climate—an' for the last two years she's been teachin' in the 'igh school in Los Angeles."

"And you haven't seen her in all these years?" Geary demanded.

"Not a look, Willie. She's been after me ever since she graduated from the convent to let her come 'ome an' visit me, but I'd've told er to s'wim first. An' now, s'help me, she won't wait no longer; she's comin' to visit me! Gor', Willie, she's on her w'y!"

"So this cablegram would indicate," Geary observed. "Nevertheless, Mother, I'm at a loss to know why you should feel so cut up over the impending visit."

There was real fear in Mother Jenks' tear-dimmed eyes. "I cawn't let 'er see me," she wailed. "I won't 'ave 'er know what I am. I'm a lydy, before 'e died, give me enough money to 'educate 'er like a lydy—"

Again Mother Jenks' grief overcame her. "Gor', Willie, I ain't respectable. She's comin' to see me—an' I cawn't let 'er. She mustn't know 'ow I cawn't the money for 'er 'education—sellin' 'ell-fire to a pack of rotten dorgs an' consortin' with the scum of this stinkin' 'ole! Oh, Willie, you've got to 'elp me, I cawn't 'ave 'er comin' to El Buen Amigo to see me an' I cawn't ruin 'er reputation by callin' on 'er in public at the 'Otel Mateo. Oh, Gor', Willie, Mother's come a cropper.

Willie agreed with her. He patted the sinful gray head of his landlady and waited for her to regain her composure, the while he racked his agile brain for a feasible plan to fit the emergency.

"She been picturin' me in 'er mind all these years, Willie—picturin' a fraud," wailed Mother Jenks. "If she sees me now, wot a shock she'll get, pore young sweet'eart—an' 'er the spittin' himage of a bangel. And oh, Willie, while she don't remember wot she looked like, think o' the shock if she meets me! In 'er lawst letter she said as 'ow I was the only hanchor she had in life. Ho, yes. A sweet-lookin' hanchor I am—an' Hi was 'opin' to die before she found hout. I've got a hanchorism in my 'eart, Willie, so the surgeon on the mail boat tells me, an' w'en I go, I'll go like—that!" Mother Jenks snapped her cigarette-stained fingers. I'm fifty-seven, Willie, an' since my sainted 'Enery passed away, I 'aven't been no bloomin' bangel." She wrung her hands. "Oh, w'y in 'ell couldn't them harteries 'ave busted in time to save my lamb the 'umiliatin' knowledge that she's be'oldin' to the likes of me for wot she's got—an' 'ow I got it for 'er."

Billy Geary had a bright idea. "Well," he said, "why not die—temporarily—if you feel that way about it? You could come back from the grave after she's gone."

But Mother Jenks shook her head. "No," she declared. "While Dolores is self-supportin' now, still, if anythink 'appened an' she was to need 'elp, 'elp is needful' no ghost can give. Think again, Willie. Gor, lad, w'ere's yer brains?"

"Well," Billy countered thoughtfully, "apparently there's no way of heading her off before she takes the steamer at New Orleans, so we'll take it for granted she'll arrive here in due course. About the time she's due, suppose you run up to San Miguel de Padua for a couple of weeks and leave me in El Buen Amigo in your absence. I'll play fair with you, Mother, so help me. I'll account for every centavo. I'll borrow some decent clothes from Leber the day the steamer gets in; then I'll go aboard and look over the passenger list, and if she's aboard, I'll tell her you closed your house and started for California to visit her on the last north-bound steamer—that her cablegram arrived just after you had started; that the cable company, knowing I am a friend of yours, showed me the message and that I took it upon myself to call and explain that as a result of your departure for the United States it will be useless for her to land—useless and dangerous, because cholera is raging in Buenaventura, although the port authorities deny it—"

"Willie," Mother Jenks interrupted impressed, a shoot of her old debonair spirit a-shining through her tears, "yer don't owe me a bloomin' sixpence! Yer're syved the day, syved my reputation, an' syved a lydy's peace o' mind. Kiss me, yer precious byby."

So Billy kissed her—gravely and with filial reverence, for he had long suspected Mother Jenks of being a pearl cast before swine, and now he was certain of it.

"I'll send her back to the United States and promise to cable you to await her there," Billy continued. "Of course, we can't help it if you and the cablegram miss connections, and once the young lady is back in the United States, I dare say she'll have to stay there a couple of years before she can save the price of another sea voyage. And in the meantime she may marry."

"Or that hanxiemism may 'ave turned the trick before that," Mother Jenks suggested candidly but joyously. "In coorse she'll be disappointed, but then disappointment never lays 'eavy on a young woman, Willie. I've 'eld disappointed at not seein' a person you ain't really acquainted with ain't as bad as some disappointments."

"I guess I know," Billy Geary replied bitterly. "If that cablegram had been for me I'd have, if not old partner cool, by some miracle, manage to marry this Dolores girl, your arteries and your aneurisms might bust and be damned, but the girl would be mine."

"M'ybe," Mother Jenks suggested hopefully, "yer might fix it up for her w'en I'm gone From all haccounts 'e's no end a gentleman."

"He's a beaut," Mr. Geary declared with conviction. He sighed. "John Stuart Webster, wherever you are, please write or cable," he murmured.

CHAPTER VI.

The ancient bromide to the effect that man proposes but God disposes was never better exemplified than in the case of John Stuart Webster, who having formulated certain daring plans for the morrow and surrendered himself to grateful slumber in his stateroom aboard the Gulf States Limited, awoke on that momentous morn to a distinct apprehension that all was not as it should be with him. His mouth reminded him vaguely of a bird-and-animal store, and riot and insurrection had broken out in the geometric center of his internal regions.

Webster was sufficient of a jack-leg doctor to suspect he was developing a splendid little case of ptomaine poisoning. He decided to go into executive session with the sleeping-car conductor, who waved ahead for a doctor to meet the train at the next station. And when the sawbones came and pawed Jack Webster over, he grayely announced that Webster had the slightest ambition to vote at the next presidential election, he should leave the train at St. Louis and enter a hospital forthwith. To this heart-breaking pronouncement Webster entered not the slightest objection, for when a man is seriously ill, he is in much the same position as a politician—to-wit: He is in the hands of his friends.

However, life had the habit of going hard with Webster so frequently that fortunately he was trained to the minute, and after three days of heroic battling the doctor awarded Jack the decision. Thereafter they kept him in the hospital ten days longer, "feeding him up" as the patient expressed it—at the end of which period Webster, some fifteen pounds lighter and not quite so fast on his feet as formerly, resumed his journey toward New Orleans.

In the meantime, however, several things had happened. To begin, Dolores Ruey spent two days wondering what had become of her quondam knight of the wastes—at the end of which period she arrived in New Orleans with the conviction strong upon her that while her hero might be as courageous as a wounded lion when dealing with men, he was the possessor, when dealing with women, of about two per cent less courage than a cottontail rabbit. Being a very human young lady, however, she could not help wondering what had become of the ubiquitous Mr. Webster, although the fact that he had mysteriously disappeared from the train en route to New Orleans did not perturb her one-half so much as it had the disappearance. She had determined, over that unfortunate man. Whereas he did not know she was bound for Buenaventura, she knew he was; hence, upon arrival in New Orleans she dismissed him from her thoughts, serene in abiding faith that sooner or later her knight would appear, like little Bo-Peep's lost sheep, dragging his tail behind him, so to speak.

Dolores spent a week in New Orleans renewing schoolgirl friendships from her convent days in the quaint old town. This stop-over, together with the one in Denver, not having been taken into consideration by Mr. William Geary when he and Mother Jenks continued to speculate upon the approximate date of her arrival in Buenaventura, resulted in the premature flight of Mother Jenks to San Miguel de Padua, a fruitless visit on the part of Billy Geary to the offices of the United Fruit company's line, followed by a hurry call to Mother Jenks to return to Buenaventura until the arrival of the next steamer.

This time Billy's calculations proved correct, for Dolores did arrive on that steamer. The port doctor came aboard, partook of his customary drink with the captain, received a bundle of the latest American newspapers and magazines, nosed around, asked a few perfunctory questions, and gave the vessel pratique.

Dolores observed a gasoline launch shoot up to the landing at the foot of the companion-ladder and discharge a well-dressed, youthful white man. As he came up the companion, the purser recognized him.

"Howdy, Bill," he called.

"Hello, yourself," Mr. William Geary replied, and Dolores knew him for an American. "Do you happen to have as a passenger this trip a large, interesting person, by name John Stuart Webster?" added Billy Geary.

"I don't know, Billy. I'll look over the passenger list," and together they moved off toward his office. Dolores followed, drawn by the mention of that magic name Webster, and paused in front of the purser's office to lean over the rail, ostensibly to watch the stevedores in their lighters clustering around the great ship, but in reality to learn more of the mysterious Webster.

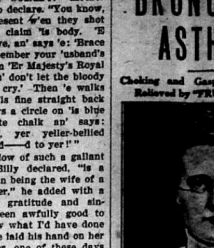
BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

Choking and Gasping for Breath Relieved by "FRUIT-A-TIVES"



MRS. PENNINGTON
New Rockland, P.Q.

"In 1919, I was taken with Bronchial Asthma and no one knows what I suffered with it during the winter. I began having Choking Spells—gasping for breath and could not speak. I would have one of these bad spells in the evening, one during the night, and one in the morning. The doctor said he could do nothing for me.

"In the spring of 1920, I started taking "Fruit-a-tives" and in a few days, the choking spells stopped, and I have had none since May 7th, 1920. I have so wanted to tell other sufferers who have the same trouble about "Fruit-a-tives" for I know how they must suffer.

Some thought the Asthma would come back on me as winter came on but it has not, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives" Mrs. J. M. PENNINGTON.

"Blast the luck," Billy Geary growled, "the old sinner isn't here. By the way, is Miss Dolores Ruey aboard?"

Dolores pricked up her little ears. What possible interest could this stranger have in her goings or comings?

"You picked a winner this time, Bill," she heard the purser say. "Stateroom sixteen, boat-deck, starboard side. You'll probably find her there, packing to go ashore."

"Thanks." Billy replied and stepped out of the purser's office. Dolores turned and faced him.

"I am Miss Ruey," she announced. "I heard you asking for me." Her eyes carried the query she had not put into words: "Who are you, and what do you want?" Billy saw and understood, and on the instant a wave of desolation surged over him.

How Western Cattle Die.

Darwin has described the curious instinct of the guano of South America which leads it to "have favorite spots for lying down to die," and now comes a description by Mr. R. A. Brooks, a Canadian naturalist, of the behaviour of cattle and buffalo under the stress of cold, starvation and fright, which clearly indicates how large masses of the bones of these animals have been accumulated. Mr. Brooks says that during the hard winter of 1906-7 thousands of herds of Canadian cattle perished from starvation and cold. "I remember well," he writes, "how they lay down and died. The first cow to die usually made its way to a lonely place, generally a clump of brush or a coulee, and lying down simply waited to die. The next one feeling her time approaching followed in the tracks of the first one, and died close beside her; and this was kept up until there were no more, or relief came." At one ranch in Central Alberta the owner showed Mr. Brooks a coulee where 450 head of his cattle died. This pile of bones actually made a dam across the ravine. Within half a mile was another pile of bones, all that was left of 675 head. Stampede excitement is the cause of many buffalo bones at the bottom of cliffs, and it is well known that in the early days the Indians themselves used the stampede herds of buffalo over the cliffs.

Flag at Half-mast.

Defeat in battle, on land or sea, has for centuries been shown by the lowering of a flag. At sea the flag of the conquered was hung below the flag of the conqueror, and so it is that the lowered flag—being a sign of loss, desolation or grief—has come to mean that someone has fallen victim to death, the great conqueror.

Another explanation is that a ship's flag is dipped as a mark of courtesy or respect so a flag is lowered half-mast in respect to the dead.

Tell-tale Kerchiefs.

In 1745 handkerchiefs stamped with the portraits of the Young Pretender in battle array were issued with a view to facilitating the capture of the rebels.

Bad Luck for Bride.

It is supposed by many people to be bad luck for a bride to turn her head round and look back at her home on her way from the doorstep to the wedding-carriage.

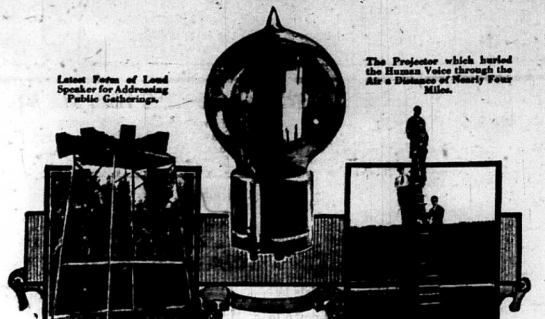
One Small Voice, But Millions May Hear!



Typical Vacuum Tube, many of which are used in the big Amplifier.
The Projector which hurled the Human Voice through the Air a Distance of Nearly Four Miles.
Latest Form of Loud Speaker for Addressing Public Gatherings.

New discoveries in the realm of communication have followed fast on each other's heels!

Imagine Prime Minister Mackenzie King seated at his desk in Ottawa. Speaking in his ordinary tones he is making an announcement of great public interest to the people of all Canada. The Russell Theatre, a few blocks away in Ottawa, is filled with a great crowd that listens intently to his every word. In Montreal, the big Arena on Mount Royal Avenue is packed to the doors, and here, too, everyone is listening to what the Premier is saying. In Toronto, at Massey Hall another multitude is following the speaker with breathless interest. The Walker Theatre, Winnipeg, is filled to overflowing, and everyone hears the Prime Minister's announcement. So also in Vancouver, on the Pacific, and in Halifax, on the Atlantic, great crowds listen as Mr. King speaks.

"Pure fancy," do you say? Not at all. The wonderful vacuum tube amplifier or "Loud Speaker" just perfected by Bell Telephone engineers has accomplished feats quite as wonderful as suggested above. Not only does this apparatus reproduce the human tones of a speaker to a multitude however great, but the characteristics of the voice are preserved and its every inflection faithfully reproduced.

The possibilities of the Bell Loud Speaker are almost infinite. Vast gatherings near or far from the rostrum, without its being necessary to equip individuals with any apparatus, will listen to a speaker and the problem of hearing what is said will be solved once for all. The amplifiers used in the Loud Speaker can magnify sound ten billion times, and listeners nearly four miles away from the receiving apparatus have heard perfectly!

AN OUTFIT FOR SPRING WEAR

AN OUTFIT FOR THE BRIDE

Gorgeous, to say the least, is this offering to the June bride. The gown is sleeveless, in keeping with Dame Fashion's decree. The tiny shower bouquet is one of the newest of the season's bridal bouquets.

SOME SMART NEW SWEATERS

Hand painting, combined with touches of embroidery, decorate some of the handsome new silk sweaters. The painting is done in a conventional, medium sized design on the white silk, further decorated with touches of embroidery in metallic or a deeper tone of the painted design. One white silk model made in slip-on style is painted in navy blue with touches of the metallic embroidery and is finished with a border of the brushed wool in navy blue at the bottom of the sweater and on the short set-in sleeves. The wide neck line is outlined with a narrow design of the painting in navy blue, and white and navy blue cord belt completes the model.

Another white slip-on sweater is made in the Shetland wool dropstitch with the round neck line finished with a rolling collar of yellow silk, from which a tassel drops in front. Yellow silk also edges the bottom of the sweater and the short sleeves that are attached to the sweater at the wide shoulder seam. The belt of silk ties around twice.

REAL LACE IS QUICKLY MADE

Artist With Needle Can Make Decoration That Closely Resembles Work of Professional.

Trace a design on the material to be used and underneath it lightly tack some Brussels net. Under the net place a piece of heavy cotton cloth. Pad the design where it will be most effective with a coarse mercerized thread, using a much finer number for the actual embroidery. When padding the stitches must always be the reverse of the way the embroidery is to be worked, and the embroidery itself must be worked in satin stitch, always being careful to take up the net foundation. When the design is finished take a sharp pair of scissors and cut away the muslin all around the pattern, being careful not to clip the net. The net must, of course, be cut away from any part of the material not covered by the design. When finished the work looks like exquisite lace.

WAISTCOAT ADDS TO SUIT

Accessories Are Used Alike on Formal and Informal Costumes—Cotton Homespun Neckwear.

Spring is to see the waistcoat or gilet established as an essential accessory to the smart suit costume This is the only conclusion one can reach after viewing a number of spring neckwear lines, which are now opening fast, and which are of exceptional interest.

The neckwear trade is talking sport neckwear strongly, and consequently is showing fabrics of appropriate weave and in exceedingly smart color effects.

What promises to be one of the successful fabrics of the season for this purpose is "cotton homespun," which comes in plain colors and in good looking stripes, and is smartest when severely mannish, or decorated with hand drawn work.

Some embroidery in colors is used as well. New models in this material have been brought out. One has a characteristic roll sport collar and pockets in the turned up bottom.

A collarless model, with hand drawn revers at the front, is effectively worn with a coat having a black collar.

There are mannish waistcoats in this same material, collarless and pocketed, in narrowly striped homespun.

There are many Puritan collared gilets in the spring collection, and the materials and colors in which they, as well as other models, are being shown are innumerable.

VARIETY IN SPRING VEILS

Many Interesting Face Coverings Are Now Being Shown for the Season at Hand.

In the lineup of spring accessories and for the season at hand many interesting novelties are shown. The long, narrow scarf or panel veil is one of the new bits of face covering, and it may be worn in ever so many ways.

This scarf veil is frequently draped across the hat and allowed to fall over the shoulders, giving a soft, becoming framing to the face. Or may be draped over the hat and drawn back to be tied under or across the hair. The ends are finished with entirely borders of one sort or another. Fringe is a not unusual trimming. The larger veils are frequently finished with cord or ribbon fringe.

Among the new veils may be mentioned the large square one with a fine mesh section woven into one side, this section forming a tight face veil, while the veil proper with its more heroic pattern drapes the hat and shoulders.

FASHIONS IN BRIEF

Kasha cloth makes charming costumes for country wear.

Black jet nail-heads are used a great deal as trimming.

Conservative silhouettes lead in blouse styles, with the peasant outline much modified.

In cottons, dimity keeps its place; voiles are steadily growing in popularity and cotton crepe appears as a novelty item.

Suede pockets and wigwam fringes on tweeds; velvet backs to peaked revers; collars and capes of fur or duvetyn inlays have also been seen.

Felt hats with soft bell-shaped crowns have the brims slashed in one way or another and overlapped to simulate quills, the edges bound in ribbon.

Lace is playing a large part in the making and trimming of hats, and some dainty smart little models of hair braid are trimmed almost wholly in softly draped lace veils.

Chamois gloves are made with trimmings of kid. Sometimes the cuff of the chamois gauntlet is made with cutwork, beneath which shows a pattern in the darker kid.

CHIC FOR THE LITTLE GIRL

Striking even for the "littlest girl" is a frock of white organdie, worn with a large black milan hat with long streamers—a combination that is always good.

A Paris Suggestion.

Paris offers this suggestion for spring. The entire dress is made of black chiffon, even the three roses at the waistline. It will be just as effective, however, if you select crepe satin, canton crepe or taffeta, or combine satin and cloth. The underskirt and draped tunic are joined to a camisole lining. The overblouse and girdle are attached, closing at the left side. Lower edge of skirt is about one and five-eighths yards.

WEAR BRIGHT RED

Hats, Purses, Shoes Are of the Most Brilliant Hue.

Shade Is Pronounced in the Newest Offerings Being Shown in the French Shops.

To those who cannot go to Paris and stroll along the Rue de la Paix, where some of the most beautiful novelties in the world are shown, as well as many of the interesting hats which eventually find their way to the millinery shops in this country, the novelties and millinery fresh from Paris are especially interesting. They represent the newest offerings of the exclusive French shops.

The bright red straw hats come first in this abbreviated review of styles. They are harbingers of spring after the long winter days. Some one has said that when it comes to the matter of taste in dress women are divided into two classes—those who wear hats and those who do not. It is more than likely that the former will be in the majority this year.

Leather in the brightest of reds, verging on the scarlet hues, is used for hats that are to be worn country roads and golf courses, as one might expect, but are made in designs quite appropriate for town wear.

In colonial days both men and women wore shoes with red heels as the whim of today with scarlet heels and tongues are a revival of a fashion prevalent in times when all dress was more frivolous and much more picturesque than it is today.

NEW NOVELTIES IN HANDKIES

Attractive Lines of Embroidered and Otherwise Decorated Kerchiefs Now on Display.

An exceedingly attractive line of handkerchiefs is composed of those of hand rolled and woven linen, with delicate, elaborately embroidered trims. The linen is very fine, almost gauze-like in appearance, with brilliance that is due to the process of the aid which has made it. The embroidery is often along the spoke stitch line, many rows of openwork making a wide border, while medallions intricately worked out are also noticeable. These handkerchiefs are hard to get now, and are on that account distinctive. Some irregularly shaped scallop borders are also worthy of note, being combined with the embroidery.

Some hand embroidered animal handkerchiefs are pleasing. They are both in white on colored linen, and in colors on white. While they may be primarily attractive for children, they are by no means impossible for grownups.

Another group takes in the printed models. These employ wide colored borders frequently relieved by white polka dots. Elaborate landscape designs are also to be had, one showing a moonrise. Sometimes instead of a colored border the color square is in the center.

ABOUT DRAFT HORSES

ANIMALS OF QUALITY AND SUBSTANCE IN DEMAND.

Breeding Prospects Are Much Better for 1922 Than They Were a Year Ago—A Dash of Warm Blood Necessary for a Gelding Required to Do Hot-Weather Duty on the Farm.

On farms, living conditions for the work horse are more exacting than in the city. Their winter idleness ends suddenly in a spurt of ploughing, harrowing and seeding to get the crop in. On far too many farms the grain feed supply for the horses is at very low level by the time spring seeding is over, and the stock, reduced in flesh by hard work, are given a rest in the form of a turnout on new grass that has not yet passed the hungry state. Such treatment is hardly the thing to prepare the animals for hot-weather work in the corn fields and at the haying.

While aside to the difficulty of horse labor supply on the farms of this country in any year is the shortage of horseflesh, inbred by the farmer's natural objection to wintering more idle animals than he considers absolutely necessary. Just at this period, this difficulty of horse shortage is accentuated by reason of the fact that breeding has been largely neglected of late years, owing to the falling demand for horses in the city markets. At the back of it all lies the increase in use of mechanical motors for city hauling, and to only a slightly smaller degree for traction on the farms. There is, however, a reason further back, and that reason, namely, the rush of war-time production, has been removed, and demand for work horses is coming back.

As aforementioned, one great reason for horse labor trouble on the farm is the persistent shortage of supply during the busy season due largely to the expense entailed in wintering a heavy stock. Renewal of the market demand for horses tends to supply a solution for this latter problem. Where an outlet can be found for surplus farm horses by means of sale, a farmer can afford to winter a sufficient stock to provide all the power necessary for his farm work during spring, summer and fall. Moreover, he can afford under such conditions, to support a goodly number of brood mares in his stable, dividing the farm work between them, so that no mare gets more to do than is good for her, yet enough work to keep her in good breeding condition. The hot-weather conditions above referred to emphasize the importance of having all farm work horses, mares included, in at least fair working condition throughout the busy season.

Recent reductions in the horse population has not proved an unmixed misfortune. One bright spot exists in the fact that the worst specimens were the first to be sacrificed. In Ontario, the results of legislation prohibiting the use of cross-bred or grade stallions have been the most encouraging for reason of the fact that owners have been more careful in their selection of mares for breeding, before parting with the service fee charged for a good pure-bred stallion. In some of the best horse-breeding sections, as a result of the enforcement of the Stallion Act together with the discarding of inferior mares as breeders, the actual number of good mares of draft type is now almost equal to the total number of mares, good and bad that existed before the act went into effect. Unfortunately, this does not apply in sufficient number-al sections. What is most desirable at this stage of the game is, that all good mares be bred, that is, where a first-class stallion of the right breed is available. Unfortunately, again, not every pure-bred stallion is a good stallion — and few of them now at service ought to be geldings. A little more attention to importing and the selection of the horses imported might help the situation, though there must be a limit to enthusiasm for importing sires of the draft breeds, as the breeders of real good pure-bred stallions at home deserve every possible encouragement.

Not only in the draft breeds, however, should the farmer who is a horse lover begin to show greater interest than of late. Despite all effort opposed to the sort, racing is becoming more popular year by year, and the production of horses suited to take part in the game is legitimate business for the farmer. In the way of thoroughbreds, some splendid stallions have been imported from Britain with a view to improving the light horses of this country. The breeding of good pure mares to stallions of such power and quality at these, gives the farmer an opportunity to turn out something in the line of a saddle horse, hunter or cavalry remount, that will bring him good returns for his investment. The encouragement of such production is the announced object of this importation, but there is nothing to prevent the breeding of a thoroughbred mare on a farm, though training of the progeny is a matter a little outside the scope of the average farmer's operations.

A writer argued in favor of giving draft mares and stallions a reasonable amount of farm work, in order that they might produce good "doers" as well as "good-lookers." He remarked incidentally that "the draft-horse breeder does not regard so reliable a criterion of excellence as the breeder of trotters and thoroughbreds, the reason being that the race track affords a much more severe test of stamina, soundness and nerve than show-ring standards." A dash of warm blood in the gelding required to do hot-weather duty on the farm would possibly give him the advantage over the animal that is all cold blood.

The Evils of Overloading.

The danger of overloading a tractor or any other automotive vehicle cannot be over-emphasized, for probably no other cause is responsible for more failures with machines of this kind. Intelligent engineering design enters into construction of an automotive machine. In the beginning, certain maximum duties are specified which the machine to be built must perform, and it is designed in every part to do this work well. If abnormal loads are put upon it, all the various mechanical parts are subjected to undue strain, which, being greater than they can withstand, sooner or later results in their failure. If every owner could be taught to take care of his machine, he would be adding years and years to its life and to its successful use.

He who misuses power will lose it. —Farm Mechanics.

Hog Losses.

Prematurely born litters, small litters and heavy mortality after farrowing have resulted in losses of disastrous dimensions to hog raisers in the corn belt of the Middle Western States. Many cases of hairless pigs are also reported among spring litters.

Reports from different parts of Ontario would indicate that this condition to a considerable extent holds true for this province.

Prepare Soil for Gardens.

In order to have a good garden it is well to prepare the land as soon as the soil conditions will permit, by first ploughing the entire area to a depth of 8 to 10 inches, applying stable manure broadcast and harrowing thoroughly until a perfect seedbed is formed.

The surface of the unplanted as well as the planted land should be cultivated in order to conserve moisture.

GRADING DAIRY PRODUCTS.

Government Action to Secure Uniform Export Material.

Occasional excellence may obtain a customer, but it is only uniformity and reliability that will retain him. This was evidently the view taken by those who attended the Ottawa conference to discuss the proposal to grade dairy products intended for export. The subject for some time past has been ventilated in the agricultural press and discussed at meetings of dairymen in all parts of the country. It is one of the characteristics of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, however, that no important policy is put in force without advising with the interests directly concerned. The conference recently held was attended by over sixty delegates. These represented every province in the Dominion, as well as dairy and creamery associations, milk producers, cheese boards and governmental dairy officials, both Dominion and Provincial. The Dominion Minister of Agriculture, Hon. W. R. Motherwell, the Deputy Minister, Dr. J. H. Grisdale, were present, and the dairy commissioner, Mr. J. A. Ruddick, presided.

While the difficulties to be overcome and the objections to be met were not overlooked, the concensus of opinion was that the proposed grading and standardization of butter and cheese would be a move in the right direction, and would have a beneficial effect in stabilizing the trade with Great Britain and other countries. Emphasis was laid upon the advance in quantity and quality of the dairy products exported by New Zealand, Denmark and other lands, and it was agreed that if Canada is to meet the increased competition that has arisen she must take this forward step. The Department is now organizing a qualified staff of graders. When that is done, the regulations dealing with the matters which have been adopted under the Dairy Produce Act will come into force. These regulations will be found to provide for four grades both of butter and cheese—for butter the grades are: Specials, First, Seconds, and Off-grades, and for cheese: Finest, Fine, Seconds and Off-grades.

Culling of Poultry Flock.

Intelligent culling of the poultry flock is of the utmost importance for success in poultry keeping, say specialists of the Department of Agriculture.

CULL THESE HENS.

Sick, weak, lacking vigor, inactive, poor eaters, early moulters with small, puckered, hard, dry vents; with small, shriveled hard, scaly, dull-colored combs; with thick or coarse, stiff pelvic bones, that are close together, small spread between pelvic bones and round end of keel, and hard, small abdomen. In breeds with yellow skin and shanks the discarded hens should also show yellow or medium yellow shanks and yellow beaks and vents.

SAVE THESE HENS.

Healthy, strong, vigorous, alert, and active; good eaters; not moulting or just beginning to moult in September or October; with large, moist vents; with full, soft combs; thin, pliable pelvic bones well spread apart, wide-spread between pelvic bones and rear end of keel, and large, soft, pliable abdomen. In breeds with yellow skins and shanks, the hens saved should also show pale or white shanks, and pale or white beaks and vents.

Rotted Manure Preferable.

Manure loses much of its plant food in the process of rotting. Its mechanical condition, however, is much improved, because there is a great deal of the coarse organic matter broken down. Much of this will be lost through decay, and the percentage of mineral plants food, remaining may be greater per ton of manure in the rotted than the fresh condition. These facts make rotted manure preferable for truck crops where quick results are desired and where a large amount of manure is used, says F. L. Duley of the University of Missouri college of agriculture. Too heavy applications of fresh manure may often burn plants, especially during dry seasons. The coarse organic material keeps the soil open and reduces its capacity to retain moisture. However, there is too much loss of plant food in rotting and it is advisable to apply manure as soon as possible.

VALUABLE BORDEAUX.

Timely Spraying Controls Potato Leaf Hopper.

During the past few years a small greenish hopper, called the Potato Leaf-Hopper, has been very abundant in potato fields in Southern Ontario, and experience has shown that this insect is one of the most destructive pests of potatoes. Experiments have clearly demonstrated that the hopper causes a leaf-burn, termed "hopper-burn," which, when severe, results in the premature death of the plants. Last year most of the so-called "blighting" of early planted potatoes in Southern Ontario was in reality hopper-burn.

"It is very fortunate that the applications of bordeaux mixture recommended for the control of early blight and late blight, etc., will prevent hopper burns," says W. A. Ross, in charge of the Dominion Entomological Laboratories, Welland Station. Experiments conducted by the Dominion Entomological Branch during the past three years have proved this. For example, last year in an experiment conducted with Irish Cobblers, the thorough applications of bordeaux mixture prevented hopper-burn, and, what is of more interest to the practical grower, the sprayed Cobblers yielded over 2¼ times the crop yielded by the unsprayed plants.

The first application should be put on when the plants are five or six inches in height, and subsequent appplications should be made at intervals of 10-14 days as long as the plants are green.

N.B.—For the control of the potato beetle, add 1½ lbs. of arsenate of lime or 2 lbs. of arsenate of lead powder per 40 gallons to the bordeaux mixture.

Spraying with bordeaux mixture prevents hopper-burn, potato flea-beetle injury, early blight, late blight and rot. In hot dry seasons, the leaf hopper is liable to be injurious and in wet seasons late blight may be destructive, therefore, it pays to spray every year.

Apart from the control of insect and fungus pests, it pays to spray potatoes because bordeaux mixture stimulates the plants. Various investigators have noticed that, even in seasons when there was little or no insect injury or disease, the increase due to spraying was always large enough to make the undertaking profitable.

Sorghum Syrup.

A marked increase in the production of sorghum syrup is indicated by recent years. At the beginning of the world war the annual yield of sorghum syrup on this continent was approximately 13,000,000 gallons This has increased steadily until for the past year it was approximately 30,000,000 gallons. The average yield of syrup per acre has been about 100 gallons, but the fact that this figure can be increased is indicated by the departments experiments, in which more than 400 gallons per acre have been produced in some localities. The crop can be grown in Ontario, British Columbia, and the warmer sections of other provinces

Calcium chloride has been distributed on the Cobourg Road from King street to the town limits, and has been pronounced as highly satisfactory as a dust settler. The work was done by the provincial highway men. Calcium chloride is a clean white chemical salt, with the peculiar property of attracting moisture to itself. It readily dissolves where exposed to the air and quickly combines with the surface to which it is applied. In practice calcium chloride absorbs the moisture during the night and will dry out somewhat during the day, but as it renews itself each night the process is continuouus, thereby maintaining a dustless, smooth surface road.

Kenzie, a man who spent many years in the service of the company, and who, by reason of his long term of service is also present a narrative of absorbing interest, full of reminiscences of the days and the events of the North of bygone days. It will be continued in future issues of the magazine, and it is certain to prove an intensely popular feature. There is a fish story entitled "Shooting Fish," which is told in humorous vein, by that well known writer, Maximilian Foster. H. Mortimer Batten, whose work has become very popular with Rod and Gun readers, is at his best in "Firepoint," a thrilling story. And there are other features and articles which are well up to the standard. The departments are of generous size and high quality, and altogether the July number is one of the best ever published.
